Dale had a leaden look up in his face. I've forwarded the emails. We've been getting a little press on this since the girl attempted suicide. It's unfortunate she took the pills at school, but probably good since it meant that medical help was on the scene fast. I wouldn't suggest going after the girl, but I think her parents need some guidance on how to handle this. They should consider getting her some treatment, maybe a residential facility for a few weeks so she's out of the area.

My advice is get the boy shipped to basic in the next week and get him out of the country as soon as they get him through basic. Out of sight, out of mind. This should take pretty fast.

Dear Miss Novak:

If you did in fact SEND INFORMATION to your high school principal fraudulently accusing someone of subversive activities, then you are liable for criminal prosecution. However, our questioning of Heath Sandleben revealed that he does, in fact, harbor subversive sympathies. I think that this is a misguided attempt on your part to protect a young man that you still have feelings for.

I want you to know that you should not second guess yourself in this matter. What you did was the right thing, as I think close examination of your own conscience will tell you. Perhaps you should speak to a school guidance counselor or your pastor about this.

Sincerely,
Dale Hajdik

Dear Mr. Dale Hajdik,

I am sending you this email because I would like to take back what I said about Heath Sandleben. I know I told the school about those anarchist signs and all that, but they were just because some friends of his tried to start a band back when we were Freshman and they didn't really know anything about anarchism, they just thought it was cool. I sent that email because I was mad at Heath. He isn't really an anarchist. I was mad because he broke up with me. If anyone should get in trouble it should be me and Heath shouldn't have to go in the army. He wouldn't even be any good IN THE ARMY BECAUSE She's not a jock or anything.

I know what I did is wrong. I'm really sorry.

You think it was so fucking great to have been at the first meeting in LA? (15 years now? Feels like 50.) Ground zero for the resistance. God, yeah, AT THE, the mural, the transports—cool shit. I thought that by going to some secret meeting I was standing up to make a difference.

Now I've been on the run for the last seven years. My brother Paul is dead because he threw himself out a window rather than go to Guam and rat me out. I never sleep in the same place twice. I wake up in the morning and I look at the floor trying to remember where the hell I am—lino, ratty carpet, the concrete of somebody's mildewed basement. Good for me. I'm fucking revolutionary. I don't change the world. I'm lucky if I do my laundry.

Mostly I'm a cockroach. I find cracks in the American machine and I survive.

I really appreciate you agreeing to answer a couple of questions. We're going to get this on the network. Knowing that someone who was at that first meeting fifteen years ago is still out there, resisting and evading capture—that means a lot to me and other people like me.

Can you tell me what it was like to be at that first meeting?

Remember where we met for the last Stonewall anniversary? Be there next Friday, an hour later than last time.

Please remember to pray for C.U., who was arrested last week. Inquiries as to where he is being held, or on what charges, have proven fruitless. His wife is rumored to be heading north via safehouses.

S.K. would like to thank everyone for their prayers and support. She's been able to re-establish her father's citizenship account, which was incorrectly deleted three weeks ago, and has reinstated home care. He is now in the hospital recovering from dehydration. Also pray that this incident does not subject S.K. to further scrutiny.

They weren't all contra dancers, that was just one guy. (Who knew contra dancing was a hotbed of resistance?)

My cousin married an asshole and she finally got the smarts to dump him. He's been stalking her so she took the two kids and went to some women's shelter which turns out to be operated by Trinity Episcopal Church in some grubby place a couple doors down from the church, sharing a kitchen with five other women and their kids. I guess it's pretty miserable. I got an email from her saying that she's broke and needs a job. She heard about some meetings and said she'll let me know what she finds out.

She found a job as an admin assistant. You have an opening at your place?

Dear Miss Wallace,

The court is quite clear that you cannot be granted approval to visit Kendra at Lexington Christ the King of Heaven creche. It is a terrible shame since you childrearing score is right on the borderline.

However, however, spoken to Bridget West. It appears that the children will have an outing on March 26 at the Lexington Zoo. The zoo is a public place and there is no reason why you could not be at the front gate at 10:30 am on that day. The children will be at the zoo for about four hours that day.

I wish you luck with your class and I am sure that your persistence will pay off. May God bless you and keep you.

We are not supposed to allow anyone who has not completed their Family & Morality class to have contact with a child.

Perhaps you could forward this email to a Sophie Lingham at Lexington Family and Child Services? I think she may be able to help you.

I have attached two pictures of Kendra for you. Thank you for letting us know about her milk intolerance. She has been doing really well and her stomach is much better. She has put on four pounds and she has a good appetite for cookies!

I sent IN THE FORM TO GOD and see Kendra Wallace. I was taking the Family & Morality class and the GED class like I was supposed to but then my car's oil light was broken and I didn't know it so it's an old gasoline-only car and it ran out of oil and the engine seized up. I live in London, Kentucky and I was going to the school at Berea but then I couldn't get there without a car because there are no buses.

I have attached a statement from my teacher in Family & Morality and she says I would have got an A and raised my childrearing score and I went to the library and they helped me scan the estimate from my mechanic and I attached that to my application. I can get a bus to Lexington to see Kendra but my application came back refused. I don't know if it is because I had to stop going to class or if it is because KENDRA'S FATHER, OH DEETIE, won't marry me. He is living with Soleil Marie Smallis. I would marry him for Kendra even though he has three DWIs I would just not live with him because it wouldn't be safe for Kendra because when he gets drunk sometimes he loses his temper. But I understand the sanctity of marriage and how it is important for me and for Kendra that we have a covenant with her father before God. And I would be faithful on him even if I never saw him another day in my life because I just want to have Kendra and raise her and to be in good standing in the eyes of God.

I have a job at the Dairy Queen but they don't pay good hours, so I don't know when I will be able to get a new car.

Please, I am trying so hard. I miss her so much.

Subject: I love you

Amy,

The night before I shipped out, you asked me how I could do what I do—how I could kill people. I GAVE YOU THE CORRECT ANSWER, I KNOW. I know sometimes you think that I don't think about these kind of things. I don't, a lot of time. If I thought about it too much, I'd go crazy, you know? But that doesn't mean I don't think at all. Even a Jarhead has thoughts when he's though now and then.

I did hear you when you said that you didn't know if you could live with the fear of having someone you think is in danger all the time. I think it's harder for folks back home than it is for us. I know that sounds crazy, but I THINK THE NOT KNOWING is really hard. I love you more than anything and I would never want it to be awful if you decided to break up with me. I would hate it. Hate it more than I could say. But, I wouldn't hate you. I'd understand.

Here's what it is, as best as I can explain it. When I'm over here, I find myself THINKING OF AFGHANISTAN. These people attacked us, Amy. And they would kill you and everyone else, if they could. They would kill you in horrible ways, for having blond hair and not wearing a goddamned burkha. I'd rather lose you to some other guy than let that happen. So I'll keep thinking back here until the job is done.

Here's the other thing, and maybe it means I'm an awful person. You know my dad was in Desert Storm and his dad was in Vietnam. I hate it over here. I want to come home. But when I'm here I feel alive in some way that most people never are. I think we were evolved to hunt and fight. It's when I go home that I feel like a freak. I don't know how to talk to people. In the Corps, I know that anyone I talk to understands what he's going through something like this. Maybe me and my dad are like extremes of the human species. Maybe we're just bred to be warriors.

I never had the courage to tell you this. I know you won't understand. I wanted to try because I always want to be honest with you.

Semper Fi. Which also means, I love you.

Ian

Melissa-

I can't see you anymore.

The truth is, I didn't want to like you. I just wanted to fuck you. I'm a crappy person, basically, and I'm in some shit.

I didn't want you to be smart and funny. I definitely didn't want to care about you. To be fair, I didn't want you to care about me, either, so technically, you're the one that fucked up my brilliant plan.

Listen. There are some things I haven't told you.

Two years ago, my brother disappeared. I got some good advice to leave it alone. As you know yourself, good advice is usually wasted on me.

Anyway, there are things I know you can't know. There are places I go I can't let you get anywhere near.

You need to get out of your life and forget about me and don't fall into any romantic movie bullshit about waiting because real life isn't like that. If you can do just one thing for me, live your life and be happy and stay out of trouble. Some people have to act to make the world a better place.

You just have to be.

I won't ever forget you. Do me a favor and forget me as fast as you can.

Love,

So for a long time I didn't like the idea of getting my nerochip because I figured there would be some sort of Monitor feed for the parents to look at like they do at school, you know. But then my mom said that I was gonna have to get one if I wanted to drive, and anyway they can put all kinds of useful stuff on their like your blood type and whatever in case you're in an accident or lost or something. So anyway, I did it three days ago and my mom promised me a treat for doing it, SO....

For prom, everyone is getting henna tattoos. I paid $75 to get mine (Briana took this picture while I was getting mine but before she got hers.) On the other side [REDACTED] is a spiraly thing that circled around my nerochip. I saw something like it on French Vogue online. It was gorgeous! The woman who does the henna tattoos liked it so much that she took a picture of it and she's using it as a sample. (Robin got one like it)

Everyone has got those stupid nerochip earrings. I'm so sick of those I could puke. Ever since the Oscars, everyone wears them ALL THE TIME. But this was, you know, just SO FINE.

I get home and my weird dad asks me what's that mess on my arm. I explain it to him but he says he won't have anything A-Rab in the house and makes me wash it off. I tried to explain it was from India, but he said that was just as bad.

So now everyone else is going to have stolen my idea, I'm out $75 and I'm going to look like a disaster. I may NOT GO.

From: Blake Bessardon
To: Denver Animal Society
Date: 10 Feb, 0000 10:40PM
Subject: children and dogs

The mauling of six-year-old Misha Delmore is a tragedy that has temporarily got us get the attention of the Vox-addled populace in the Denver area for a moment. Let's make the most of it.

Explain to people now that these animals are being systematically abused. When you talk to people don't forget to mention that...

- Presas are now only the first on a growing list of breeds disallowed for private citizens.
- Ironically, the only people now allowed to breed and own Presas, pit bulls, Dobermans, German Shepherds, and other breeds are the police, who are raising them for use at prisons, detention centers, and pursuit of "criminals" without regard for the dogs' welfare.
- Local authorities suppressed the original necropsy of Ferraro, the Presa who mauled Misha, because the vet who performed it was not on the approved list for handling government-bred animals. That report showed that Ferraro, who had washed out of TSA training for the Denver airport, had had multiple broken ribs, was blind in one eye and probably had severe arthritis in his legs from blunt trauma wounds that had not properly healed.
- Ferraro had broken loose from captivity—well, if you were being beaten and starved, wouldn't you?
- The government dogs that are trained for use in prisons, detention centers and in pursuit of 'criminals' may not have bones broken, but their training creates dogs that are like Ferraro, vicious and unstable. Ferraro is a tragic example. But the government is systematically abusing dogs and them using them on anyone: protestors, union workers, a kid who gets scared of the police and runs. We are all possible future Mishas.
- The morality of a government can be seen in its treatment of its most vulnerable. That includes children and dogs.

Please Forward this to as many people as you can (If you're not worried about ending up on the price of treason). After this was written, the man who wrote it was killed by fighting.

To the World:

My name is Rafic George Awad. I live in Lebanon and my family makes olive oil. We have a farm in THE hills. I sell olive oil. It's good olive oil. Green as grass. When you put it in the refrigerator, it thickens up and you can spread it like butter.

I hear speeches from the president on the television. I AM sick of speeches. For my whole life, I have heard speeches and it doesn't get easier to sell olive oil or to farm olive trees.

I hear some 19 year old has blown himself up in an Israeli café. I AM sick of martyrs.

The Israeli farms just across the border are damaged by mortars. My farm is damaged by return fire from the Israelis and the olive oil press needs huge expensive replacement parts. The Israeli government gives money to the Israeli farmers to help them. Lebanon doesn't have money to help me so I do it myself. I should hate the Israelis but I don't hate the farmers anyway. I hope that they can raise their dairy cows and grow their cucumbers and tomatoes again soon.

I am sick of their generals and their presidents and OUR generals and our leaders. I am sick of boys who want to strap on a gun because it is easier than working on a farm. I am sick of everybody blowing everybody up.

My family makes GOOD olive oil. I just want to be able to sell it.

How goes it? I added SOME TEXT & comments/notes to the draft paper.

I'm still waffling about whether to include my "personal account." I can see your point, but I don't want this to come off in any way as the ravings of a paranormal convert. Which I may be, but you guys certainly are not. <smile>

It's still affecting me, to be honest. Like a dream you can't shake off.

Ha. See why I don't want to include my account?

Anyway, I'm working up some more text, maybe will post over the weekend. Irina's chomping GANT the bit to get something out, even if it's half-assed.

Subject: Mrs. Ablington's 8th Grade Social Studies - please give to [REDACTED]

To the substitute:

Please pass this out class today, have them read it and write a three paragraph response. If the first time, have them get in groups of four and write up what they think the Chinese government should do about this situation.

Before they write, tell them:

1. This is a translation of an actual transcript of a 14 year old boy online in Guangzhou, China from the BoM Social Studies site.
2. 'Tainhua' is an online Chinese 'RPG.' The difference is that instead of conquering and earning points that work like money in the game. (You might ask them if any of them play online games similar to this.)
3. A 'backdoor cafe' is an illegal Internet café that stays open 24 hours.
4. All of the people in the TigerAttack Clan were boys. Because of China's one child rule, there are now many more boys than girls every year. And many boys have no chance of ever having a girlfriend or getting married.

Discussion topic:

Ask the class to discuss what China is doing with all these extra boys? (Hint: there is a reason why they have been our most aggressive ally in sending troops to combat Islamic extremism in Mongolia, Indonesia, etc.)

SPEED Research question:

"Why the number 4?" – winner to get 5 points (every child to get 100 points gets a free leatherette New Testament.)

When I get back tomorrow, we'll talk about online addiction in the United States and what controls the government should place on the Internet and I'll assign them their five paragraph essay for Friday.

Thank you,

Aunt Margaret opened the door and the cops were behind her and she saw the cops and then she started screaming rape and the cops pulled their guns on the guys behind her and she grabbed Kent's hand and ran out the garage door. When we were in her car someone shot at us and hit Kent in the arm but we are okay but then I guess you probably aren't okay.

Kent threw up. We left this after school home, too.

I think it's because mom found out some of the secret stuff years ago. I know it has something to do getting people to New Zealand.

I don't know if you're ever going to read this, but when mom left you promised you'd always be there for us. What about us? I hate you!

We received your proof of continuous insurance coverage through your child's birth. However, his condition, meningoencephalocele, appears related to arsenic levels in the local environment. Your address at the time of his birth place you in the Keneday Industries of New Hampshire Industrial shadow. Keneday, which processed wood for decking, fences, and playground equipment, was severely negligent in its use and disposal of arsenic and arsenic treated waste. In -7 the company declared bankruptcy and closed.

That same year Congress passed the Limited Liability Law which states that an environmental disaster which is the result of terrorism, act of war, industrial operations which were negligently carried out without foreknowledge of severe environmental repercussions in the minds of the Directors" or any environmental disaster for which there is no civil recourse, that environmental disaster shall be termed 'an act of God.' Since Keneday no longer exists, there is no civil recourse, therefore your son's condition is considered an act of God. Your health insurance explicitly states that Beneficial Prudent Insurance does not cover such conditions.

I don't ~~mean~~ that I feel like that. I mean that it closes up and I can't swallow. It's been happening to me at chow, too. I'm hungry but when I sit down to eat, I can't swallow.

Right now we're ~~on~~ ~~at~~ ~~the~~ ~~edge~~ ~~of~~ ~~the~~ ~~desert~~ ~~but~~ ~~we~~ ~~are~~ ~~on~~ ~~patrol~~ ~~and~~ ~~it's~~ ~~actually~~ ~~just~~ ~~Urmia~~ ~~in~~ ~~post-Iran~~ ~~is~~ ~~pretty~~ ~~much~~ ~~normal~~—it doesn't get radioactive until you go farther south. The place is full of mercenaries and crazies and criminals. But there are other people living in the town. People who were too ~~poor~~ ~~to~~ leave, refugees who were afraid of the camps, ~~they~~ ~~were~~ ~~scared~~ ~~of~~ ~~the~~ ~~army~~ ~~patrols~~. Sometimes when we fly at night, the whole desert looks this strange beautiful green. I asked if it was because of the nukes but some guy who had been in Africa said the Sahara looks like that, too. It's beautiful.

Urmia is like Detroit or New Orleans or St. Louis is abandoned only with more guns and less nice stuff. It's the middle ages with Kalashnikovs. The people here are mostly Kurds. They hate us. We nuked the country. You don't know what it's like when everyone ~~hates~~ ~~you~~ ~~hates~~ ~~you~~ ~~and~~ ~~wants~~ ~~to~~ ~~kill~~ ~~you~~ ~~and~~ ~~some~~ ~~of~~ ~~them~~ ~~have~~ ~~the~~ ~~means~~ ~~to~~ ~~do~~ ~~so~~. When we go on patrol the army gives us pills so you're hopped up. We were on patrol for two weeks and sometime in the second week we were patrolling the bazaar. We'd been pinned down in firefights twice the day before. We have ~~real~~ problems keeping com guys. They target them. And medics. They target them, too.

There are straight lines in the bazaar and I'm getting crazier and crazier the longer we're in there. This little Kurdish kid, maybe ten, comes by on a bicycle and I watch him go past and then I see him stop back the bazaar on the back of his bike and he has a GPS and he establishes our position.

I shot him. The thing is, I don't remember it. I mean, I remember it like I remember seeing it. But I didn't decide to do it. Someone else shot him. I shot him, I know. But the pills shot him. I swear to God. I feel responsible for shooting him, but I don't know what I can do if I shot him without knowing about it.

I don't know if I can come home. I'm not me anymore, not the guy who shipped out. I know it will kill my mom if anything happens to me, but what if I come home and...what if I can't ever be safe around my family again?

You are in the Mallstrom.

The US government established the digital data stream American citizens have access to. The encryption on the Consolidated stream is functionally unbreakable.

The Mallstrom is another way to skin that cat.

We punch a hole in Consolidated and route part of the stream through a decryption field. We don't try to figure out the decryption keys for any one piece of data: we make a few keys and try them on *every* piece of data.

It almost never works. It's more likely that a person will win the lottery three times in a row than that any particular email will get caught in the Mallstrom.

And yet some communications *will* get caught. This is simply a statistical function of the number of messages going through the system. When data "particles" interact with our decryption field, the Mallstrom stores the "wreckage" of that collision and the "shards" can be extracted through the interface. So far this is the only attempt to hack consolidated to bear any fruit at all.

Most of what comes through is junk. We don't have the luxury of selection. The first day we tried this we got something that convinced us the experiment was worth continuing. To see it, enter erin: we'll make someone up for you if you don't!

suzy: ok!!! magdalene erin: ~~she~~ Magdalene? hahahaha suzy: shut up!

erin: suzy and mary, sittin in a tree, KISSING suzy: shut up. I was just kidding.

tiff: no ~~when~~ why do u like her?

erin: yeah?

suzy: nm

suzy: ~~magdalene~~ going to hell tiff: why?

suzy: cuz, u know. gay.

erin: my mom says that's not true, but my ~~teacher~~ says it IS true.

tiff: oh who cares? like they know anything.

suzy: I just think... ~~she~~ was prolly really pretty and everything.

erin: GROSS

tiff: how she washed Jesus' feet with her hair, ~~she~~ was really brave too.

suzy: you think so?

tiff: definitely. ~~she~~ did what was in her heart even if people told her it was wrong.

erin: you're so gonna get in trouble.

tiff: r u gonna be like a little kid and snitch?

erin: Miss Ramos from 4th grd went to prison cuz she had a GIRLfriend tiff: no way.

erin: yeah, my mom ~~said so~~ AND now she's dead.

suzy: you guys, I was just kidding. you know that, right? I was just kidding.

This is what they didn't show you on TV.

I was there.

RICK WILSON: Down there was a crash between Ernie Mills and the #43 car that started the whole chain reaction.

A tire came over the wall and tore this guy's head clear off. One second he was there with a NASCAR hat on and a 36 oz beer in his hand, staring at the Hand, and the next there was just a stump. Blood and beer splattered the whole section.

I think there were 2 or 3 drivers killed right away and a couple of fans, even before the stampede where we all tried to get out.

I am lucky to be alive except when I think about that hand I think maybe I'm just in for something worse. I think that guy had the right idea. If this is the end of the world, I need a shitload of beer.

Subject: The Catastrophe of Birth

Namaste!

I've seen it, more than seen: experienced it, a complete overwhelm of my physical and spiritual senses. It's no wonder that so many are weeping about the end of all things! Imagine watching Shiva's third eye open, waiting for the Destroyer to undo all that exists. Imagine comprehending, in a single instant, the paradox of your own vast meaning and your own cosmic insignificance. I felt the terror myself along with exquisite peace and joy.

I know in my soul that the Presence has not come to destroy. Or rather, it brings the destruction of the Tower: cataclysmic change that is both terrifying and necessary. And what follows the Tower but the Star, the Moon, the Sun! And after Judgment – which I have always understood as rebirth and absolution, not apocalypse – comes the fullness of the Universe.

These tales of DOOM AND DICE, the "hand of God" and the end of the world, these are all projections of an internal state of fear and confusion. To the infant, the catastrophe of birth must seem like death: the overwhelming sight and sound and sensation, the loss of everything familiar.

Some folks have already asked me to lead a pilgrimage to experience this cosmic re-birth. I can't lead anyone, but I will return with as many as want to go, as a fellow pilgrim. There is nothing I can tell you or show you that will have any relevance once you have experienced the Presence yourself.

Om shanti shanti shanti.

There is only one thing you have to remember.

YOU CAN ACT

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO?

ACT FOR TRUTH.

Action is morality. The Administration uses the media and police to frighten you, hoping you will be too scared to do anything about it.
WHAT IS RIGHT.

ACT FOR TOGETHERNESS.

When people join together, they become powerful. The Administration wants you to feel lonely and weak. Join with others who feel as you do. THEY CANNOT STOP US ALL.

ACT FOR CHANGE

Forming communities is the opposite of violence. A community building something together is always more powerful than an individual tearing something down. The government wants you to think nobody else feels the way you do. YOU ARE NOT THE ONLY ONE.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE ALONE

We aren't saying it will be easy. We can't promise there will be no risk. But governments rule because the people let them. This Administration can jail lone activists, it can silence individuals, but if we all work together, they cannot resist us. We are the silent majority: if the musicians and students and activists are brave enough to come together, the housewives and preachers and even the police will join us. This government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free.

GOVERNMENT REQUIRES THE CONSENT OF THE GOVERNED.

If the American people unite to create a new and better America, it WILL rise.

Roby: Hello?

Mia: Roby? Roby? Roby, are you there? Oh my god, I'm at the club, you need to get me out of here. I'm going to die, oh my God, I'm going to die.

(Gunshot and scream)

Roby: Mia, what's going on?

Mia: He killed Joey so I locked myself in the stock room and now I can't get out and everybody's got it.

Roby: What is going on?

Mia: This guy, he came into the club really freaked out. And we, we didn't even see the knife.

And his shirt was soaked red. And Joey said "Holy shit, you need a doctor".

And then the guy just stabbed him, and he was sweating blood, and screaming, and he wouldn't stop until somebody killed him with a beer bottle.

(Crash, scream from Mia)

Roby: Honey, okay wait. I'm going to call the cops.

Mia: (Screaming) They're outside, they're outside!

Mia: Don't, the cops are already here. They're the ones who locked us in.

Roby: What?

Mia: I've gotta fight, I need a weapon...a gun.

Roby: You're going to be okay, you're going to make it out of there. I'll be up there in five minutes

Roby: Mia, you okay?

(Breathing)

Mia: Roby, you there? Blood...there's blood coming out of my skin...

Roby: Mia, listen. You need to listen.

Mia: Roby, I need you to take care of my dog. Okay, the food..

(Screaming)

Roby: Mia! Mia, what's going on?!

Mia: Get me the hell out of here.

Roby: Tell me what's going on.

Mia: Oh my God, please. Help me, please, God.

INTERVIEW TRANSCRIPT

AGENT SIKES

Good morning, Officer Slanski. My name is Clark Slanski with the Feds, and they have yanked me out of my cozy bed to wrap up this mess.

SLANSKI

Mess? What's one word for it.

AGENT SIKES

OK, let's just step through the formalities.

SLANSKI

That's not an FBI badge.

AGENT SIKES

No, it's not Officer Black. Do you understand that this is an official inquiry into events surrounding the terrorist incident on the seventh of February?

SLANSKI

I do.

AGENT SIKES

And DO YOU UNDERSTAND THAT WHAT SAY today is held to be under the force of oath, and any deviations from the truth will constitute perjury and be punishable ~~as such~~?

SLANSKI

Do I need a lawyer here, or a union rep?

AGENT SIKES

Do you understand?

SLANSKI

I do.

AGENT SIKES

So, February seventh.

SLANSKI

I was walking my beat—

AGENT SIKES

Walking? Isn't there a civilian part to that?

SLANSKI

I like to do it myself every few days. People will tell you stuff if they know you.

AGENT SIKES

Very commendable I'm sure.

SLANSKI

I got a 10-48 to the Star Chamber. I got there as fast as I could.

AGENT SIKES

Star Chamber?

SLANSKI

That's what they call the building. They used to print the Star out of there, back when there were newspapers.

AGENT SIKES

But the building is empty now.

SLANSKI

Yes.

AGENT SIKES

And locals call it the Star Chamber.

SLANSKI

(no response)

AGENT SIKES

Officer Slanski? You seem to be taking a long time to answer the question.

SLANSKI

I'm trying to guess how much you know already.

AGENT SIKES

I know.

Why don't you assume I know everything, and go from there? It will save time.

SLANSKI

No, it's just called the Star Building. But underground, where the printing presses used to be, there's a big open space. That's the Star Chamber.

AGENT SIKES

Which is a ...nightclub?

SLANSKI

It's just a place. Sometimes people get together there. Sometimes they play some music. It's not very organized, AS FAR AS I know.

AGENT SIKES

As far as you know? I would think it would be your job to find out exactly how organized it was.

SLANSKI

I guess I'm not a very good cop.

AGENT SIKES

Actually, AS FAR AS I know, I was looking at the stats for your districts. Over the last eight years, when you have been shift boss, districts under your supervision have consistently reported violent crime rates 15 to 20 percent below comparable districts matched by demo-profiles.

SLANSKI

There's good people in the district.

AGENT SIKES

Curiously, your districts also consistently under-report violations of the Federal Act.

SLANSKI

It's pretty sleepy out here.

AGENT SIKES

Criminal speech, negligent morale, that sort of thing.

SLANSKI

People just want to watch TV.

AGENT SIKES

The difference is, citizens tend to report violent crime, whereas usually law enforcement officers are driving Freedom Act investigations. But you don't have much of an arrest record on that score.

SLANSKI

There's a lot of law-abiding folks in my district. Just bad luck, I guess.

AGENT SIKES

(no response)

SLANSKI

(no response)

AGENT SIKES

Did you know any of the ~~dead~~ dad?

SLANSKI

What?

AGENT SIKES

The dead. There were ~~1112~~ people locked in an underground nightclub you permitted to operate in your district. They were murdered over the course of 2 days, hunted down and torn to bloody pieces. I'm asking if you knew any of them.

SLANSKI

Yeah.

AGENT SIKES

Do you find yourself wondering if they would have been alive if you had shut that place down? I mean, if I was you, that'd ~~deal with it~~ think about.

SLANSKI

(no response)

AGENT SIKES

You answered ~~the~~ 10948 and went immediately to the Star Chamber.

SLANSKI

When I got there a couple of feds were already stringing quarantine tape.

AGENT SIKES

Could you hear anything?

SLANSKI

Screaming. Screaming and yelling. People screaming outside the doors.

AGENT SIKES

By Feds you mean people like me.

SLANSKI

Yes.

AGENT SIKES

What was your role?

SLANSKI

Crowd control. Some phone calls got out. We had people showing up trying to get into the building.

AGENT SIKES

And your job was to keep them back.

SLANSKI

People had kids in there. Brothers and sisters.

AGENT SIKES

And according to these notes, you did your job very well.

SLANSKI

It wasn't my wife or kid dying in there.

AGENT SIKES

But you were "sick about the fucking feds and you wanted to kill someone."

SLANSKI

THE PSYCHOLOGIST You have a bug in the fucking office of the police psychologist?

AGENT SIKES

Don't be paranoid, Officer Slanski. The psychologist turned over her records voluntarily.

SLANSKI

Of course she did.

AGENT SIKES

Apparently she isn't as willing to look the other way as you are when it comes to subversive thoughts. About some things, maybe—but in the face of a terrorist incident which had just taken the lives of 112 Americans....

SLANSKI

I'm not a fucking politician. I just said it made me sick to hear those people in there. There wasn't anything we could have done? I can't believe they didn't do anything.

AGENT SIKES

Try.

SLANSKI

(no response)

AGENT SIKES

Hard.

SLANSKI

(no response)

AGENT SIKES

Two days later you were called back to the scene. Describe what happened then.

SLANSKI

You know what happened.

AGENT SIKES

YES, BUT I'M VERY TIRED, so I'd like to hear you tell it. Tell me what happened yesterday.

SLANSKI

Crowd control again. A bunch of guys in bunny suits went into the building with some very serious equipment.

AGENT SIKES

What kind of equipment?

SLANSKI

I DON'T KNOW THE NAME Trowers and shit.

AGENT SIKES

And then?

SLANSKI

Then nothing. That's it.

AGENT SIKES

(no response)

SLANSKI

There was an agent.

AGENT SIKES

Yes.

SLANSKI

Like you. Same to you.

AGENT SIKESS
Yes.

SLANSKI

And that's it. She ran the clean-up. Went inside, saw what she came to see I assume, pulled out the decon unit and left.

AGENT SIKES

Not quite like me.

SLANSKI

I listen, I really don't need to know anything here. I'm not a great cop but I like the job, I like the guys, I like my family.

AGENT SIKES

Yes, I have pictures of your little girl. Would you like to see them?

SLANSKI

(no response)

I like this photo the best. She looks adorable.

SLANSKI

(No response)

AGENT SIKES

The other agent wasn't quite like me.

SLANSKI

Fuck.

I WASN'T TRYING ANYTHING~~NOTHING~~ just being polite, I just opened the car door for christ's sake.

AGENT SIKESS

She smelled strong...~~coffee~~ by ~~coffee~~ ~~coffee~~ pyrex... I got in the car and it was like I had a penny in my mouth just for a second.

AGENT SIKES

Anything else?

SLANSKI

(no response)

AGENT SIKES

Jeff, I can't help you~~you~~ I don't 100 percent—

SLANSKI

She was crying.

AGENT SIKES

But that wasn't the ~~strange~~ part.

SLANSKI

And her tears were orange.

AGENT SIKES

That's right they were.

SLANSKI

I didn't mean to see that!

AGENT SIKES

I know.

And, I'm ~~sorry~~.

February 10, 0000

Dear Danny (or Jane) —

The news crawl on this computer is reporting a Presense sighting over Minneapolis.

24.4.1

I just got off the phone with your Aunt Chrissy. She's at the hospital with your mom. She says you aren't in any hurry to come into the world just yet.

I don't blame you.

The trouble is, kiddo, I am beginning to think you and I are not destined to meet.

24.4.1

Here's your mom the day we were married. Wasn't she beautiful?

So Jane—or Danny, if you turn out to be a boy—it's just past 3 AM for you in Denver. 5 o'clock in the morning, here in Washington.

Almost dawn.

DANNY JANE, IT ISN'T the safest world you're coming into. That's my fault. I'm not making that up—I work for the government, and my job is to make you safe. Well, lots of people, I suppose, but tonight you are the only one I care about.

Potentially treasonous letter from a senior government official

This is my brother, Paul. He would have been your uncle. But some bad people blew up Los Angeles, which used to be a city with palm trees and Disneyland, and Paul joined the army. His helicopter got shot down in Yemen a few years ago.

These years I've been trying to make things safe, and somehow things are always getting worse.

I can't tell you how ashamed I am.

This is a picture of your aunt Chrissy with one of her many asshole boyfriends, the kind who is always talking about making the world a better place but never getting a job. The last time I stayed at Chrissy's place this guy threw beer on me. I didn't give a shit about the beer, but I was so pissed off with him lying on the couch all day except for "band rehearsals" that I passed along a tip about this group to the FBI.

A few months later the boyfriend disappeared. Of course Chrissy hated me. What was easier for her: believing he left her for the next good lay who wouldn't nag him about the rent—or believing that he was a Resistance Hero, spirited off to Guam by my fascist minions?

I was supposed to be there with your mom to see you into the world. But work, you know....

I'm sure she isn't surprised. I think she learned a long time ago that work is just another word for broken promises.

...When I was a boy my dad showed me how to catch a cricket in my cupped hands. He'd let me hold it for a few seconds, just to feel it flick and flutter against my palms. 3 months ago, that's what you were like. There was more room back then and you would be tumbling and flipping about—you were so active!—and your mother would grab my hand and put it on her belly and say, "See?" And I could feel you moving in there, bumping and fluttering against my hand.

I had this joke all planned out for today. After you were born, the nurses would see how active you are, how alert, and they would say something like, "Look at this kid, checking out the room!" and I was going to say, "This baby wasn't born yesterday, you know."

More Presence sightings: Honolulu. Amritsar. ~~Helsinki~~. Helsinki.

I was supposed to be there with you, but the President called me to Washington to talk about the Presence.

What is the Presence?

Why, the Presence IS THE RIBB thing you will see, Danny Jane. You will be pushed out of your warm bed and beaten and squashed and finally cast out into the cold, into the Outer Darkness is what the Bible calls it. And your mother will be crying with the pain of bearing you, and a huge hand will come down from the sky and cut you from her.

Only unlike us, you were never to blame.

The Presence seems to be everywhere this hour, and Rouen. Crete, Saigon, Lesser Slave Lake up in Alberta. Twice in Jamaica in the space of a few minutes. Saw Paulo. Reykjavik. Suburbs of Auckland.

And it's beginning to look very much like the end.

Here's what Daddy was working on until about 45 minutes ago.

The Presence: Sightings (International)

The goddamn Presence. What is this fucking thing, Doug? Some kind of, I don't know, weather phenomenon?

Weather? No, Mr. President, we don't believe so.

A weapon?

No, Mr. President, not as far as we know. Certainly not one of ours.

Russian? Syrian? Chinese?

Well Mr. President, we can't say for sure, but—

You boys have fucked up before, Doug.

Yes sir, I know that, but—

Gotta wipe their asses with their left hands, these days, like Arabs, for not being able to find fucking toilet paper, Doug.

Yes, that's right, Danny Jane – the PRESIDENT OF THE United States calls me by my very first name! That's how important your father is.

Military intelligence has been reporting the Presence in North Africa every day for the last 6 days. Sometimes the Syrian militias shoot at it, thinking it must be some weapon of our devising.

They will realize, soon enough, that it isn't war: it's the end of all our wars. Maybe the end of us, one way or another.

I haven't slept in three days. Every time I close my eyes I see a giant hand reaching from the sky and things seem terribly precious.

This is the house where I grew up. I guess it's nothing special but I wanted you to see it.

When the Presence came, for the first few days we didn't know what to do. We upped the Parepin in the water near every sighting, just to keep people from panicking, you know? We thought maybe it was a weapon of the weather or some fucking subversive PRANK, THOSE little streetcorner shitheads, give them a spray-paint can think they're fucking Zorro, while I spend my days sending agents out to die so they don't have to pray to Mecca 5 times a day.

Flashback: yesterday. I'm taking the train into work, a girl gets on—twenty-five, maybe. Square glasses, jean jacket and a black skirt, no stockings, but a scorpion tattooed on her calf. Full of life. When the train got to her station the doors hissed open, she turned and looked over her shoulder at me and smiled and I smiled back and she gave me the finger.

Fuck you, old man.

Fuck you, Washington D.C. Fuck you because you like the way I look but you're wearing slacks and a belt. Fuck you because there's a logo on your briefcase, you are Them you are the Enemy.

And you can't say, All I ever wanted was to keep you safe. But if she got on a train in fucking Syria in that get up they would cut off her hands.

None of Aunt Chrissy's friends want to hear that. They are full of liberal righteousness, which means that it's better to let foreigners rot in hell than to lift a finger to save them and be thought a bully.

Chrissy likes to think all our wars are about oil. It makes the world simple for her because if it's all just greedy tycoons somewhere there are no hard choices and she never has to be a bad guy.

I have a master's degree in political economics from Yale. She has an arts degree from a city college. I spend 12 and 14 hour days going through State Department briefs, CIA analysis papers, raw and edited surveillance footage, agent reports, and satellite data. She reads a couple of liberal blogs and lectures me on the state of the world every time we meet. Am I *aware* of the *cost* of the Syrian campaign?

I keep waiting for her to realize her own colossal arrogance, but it never happens. In Chrissy's world, facts don't matter and hard choices don't exist. Policies are like rock bands: mine is cool and yours sucks, and if mainstream people like it, it must suck ASS.

This is your grandpa before the stroke. We didn't agree on one damn thing. I wish you could have met him then, before the wheelchair and the feeding tubes. Before he was just a hideous chore in a nursing home.

My Dad was kind and gentle and let people walk all over him. I hated that.

Now I wish I had been kinder when I had the chance.

This is your grandma. Sometimes she looks at me, and I can see her searching in my face for the boy she knew, and I feel ashamed.

Boise. Istanbul. Cape Town. Macao. Buenos Aires. Münster. Brisbane. Isolated reports of the Presence coming in from California ranger stations, high up in the Sierras.

So we were in a place called The Situation Room, the President and all the Consortium hotshots, everybody spinning and spinning... "blame it on the Arabs" "blame it on the Indians" "blame it on the dissidents" and i just listened to them talk, it was like dogs barking, Danny Jane. Crows screeching.

The time for blame is over. The time for arabs and dissidents and miners and strikers and soldiers and business and anything but mercy.

We tried to make the world safe for you, Danny Jane, but we tried all the wrong things and nothing worked. The sky is full of terror and the world is falling down. We tried and we failed, BUT we didn't mean it to end this way, I swear to you. I swear to you.

You can't pack a good snowball with mittens on. The rule of 3s will make grade school math easy for you, if Mom remembers to teach it to you. Never answer chain letters but always make a wish when you blow out the candles on your birthday cake.

Tell Aunt Chissey I love her in spite of everything. Tell your mom ... tell your mom I was wrong about not getting a cat. And all those times I told her I didn't care about her first grey hairs? I wasn't lying.

Tell her I should have laughed more at her jokes.

It's so stupid, Danny Jane. We get scared and our hearts dry up. Don't be scared. Please God let me get home safe tomorrow and I swear I will quit my stupid government job and do nothing but fill you up with courage. I will take spiders out of the house for you, and buy you roller skates, and teach you how to catch crickets with your bare hands.

Bangkok, Amsterdam, Plano, Heidelberg, Beirut and Tel Aviv, St. Petersburg, Lhasa, Bangalore, Seoul, Portland, Plymouth—faster and faster, the cities pouring in. The great hand playing like lightning over the face of the world.

Happy Birthday, Danny Jane.

When they pull you squalling into life, you yell and you keep yelling. Love as hard as you can as long as you can. When that big hand comes down for you, nothing else will matter any more.

At the end—and this is what I've learned, and I don't know why it took so long—~~about~~ at the end, everything dissolves. At the end, everything you thought mattered burns away and all that's left is love and ashes.

The Price of a "Free Press"

Ilse STANESCU, A REPORTER for the now-defunct Washington Post, used her position as a journalist to protect terrorists in the United States. In the process of covering a story on Muslim students at Georgetown University, she learned that several were carrying out systematic acts of public disobedience: but failed to alert authorities.

After a bomb scare on the National Mall, Stanescu was summoned to appear in front of a grand jury and required to name her sources for her story. She refused. That was her choice if it was to achieve without consequences.

Like many a self-styled "crusading reporter" before her, Stanescu was jailed for contempt of court. Prison inmates are defined by law as unfit parents. Stanescu's husband thus INHERITED SUEGEN responsibility for the child. But as a person married to a felon, his salary was capped under the Beyond Bars incentive plan.

Ilse Stanescu reconsidered her decision and offered to name her sources. By this time, however, three thousand had died in the country. Stanescu was charged with aiding and abetting terrorism.

Unable to afford the cost of a church school, Stănescu's daughter was sent to a public school in the slums of WASHINGTON, DC

On the last day before Christmas vacation, Corl Stanescu disappeared on the way home from school.

Ilse Stalets was recently arraigned at the Baltimore Workers's Penitentiary. She is currently divorced. Her daughter is missing. All because her decision to give up the names of known terrorists came three months too late.

Sometimes the "free press" isn't so free.

Over His Head

Moshe Krasnicky wanted to open a copy shop/mailing franchise, but after careful profiling American Trust turned down his loan application.

Refusing to take the HINT, MOSES TURNED TO his family. His convinced his brother Sy Krasnecky (cognitively delayed after a childhood car accident) to loan him money from the trust their parents had established for him.

When the business was in danger of going under, Sy found some 'friends' at the tool and dye WHOLESALE WORKERS who would 'loan' him some money. Sy didn't understand loansharks. Moshe and Sy fell behind in payments, and the transsharks 'turned out their business'; the practice of using Moshe's name and credit to order tens of thousands of dollars worth of goods which they sold on the black market.

Sy told the loanshakers he would tell the police. Six days later his body was found by landfill workers; authorities believe he was probably beaten into unconsciousness and left in a dumpster due for sanitation pickup.

Moshe Katsenbach's wife divorced him and he was convicted of failing to report criminal activity and blackmarket racketeering.

Our national bank uses data from your financial records, school transcripts, and even medical records and genetic profiling to determine who deserves credit and who does not. If the bank turns you down, remember: they have your best interests at heart.

Would you undermine the economy of this country by doing business with the criminal underworld?

Is any business opportunity worth the lives of your family?

The Good Neighbors

Tim and Dayna Ayele were hospitable people. Living not far from the Mexican border, they frequently offered their children's friends a place to stay. It never occurred to them that their daughter was using the home as a "safe house" for criminals fleeing to Mexico.

Acting on a tip from a conscientious neighbor, federal agents raided the Ayele's house in pursuit of Connie Rulz Gonzalez, a prominent LA area dissident. Rulz tried to run out the back door, but during the ensuing firefight, Dayna Ayele was shot through the neck and killed.

You wouldn't take a stranger into your car. Why would you let one use your home? We all hope and pray that someday America will be safe enough to trust your co-workers, your neighbors, your children: but that day has not yet come.

Keep safe. Keep it yourself.

You've Come A Long Way, Baby

Vince Raeder and his wife, Carlena, sign up for evening classes at the local community college. Against the advice of his church elders, he signed a Head of Family waiver to allow her to enroll (requiring him to do so since three children were still under the age of 12).

Later that semester, Carlena enrolled in a week-long out-of-state seminar. Again Vince signed a Head of Family waiver. The day she left for the seminar, Vince was feverish and pale, but he told her to go anyway. She did. That night, seriously ill with one of the season's most aggressive forms of food poisoning, Vince fed himself and the children some leftovers that Carlena had forgotten to throw away.

Carlena returned from the seminar to find her husband and two of their children dead from food poisoning. The youngest, who was still on canned baby food, was in critical condition from hunger and dehydration. Carlena is now serving a five-year sentence for home endangerment.

Is "a little independence" really more important than your family's well-being?

Self-Medication

Jamal Naropa possessed a military distinction as a Special Forces operative in Syria and Turkey. During this time, he was given certain medications/treatments to enhance his strength and reaction time. When he returned, the Veteran's Administration medical personnel prescribed a simple regime to help him return to civilian life, but Naropa told friends it made him too drowsy and clumsy to work as a tow motor operator. Although he was offered a half-pay disability pension, HE CHOSE TO WORK instead. He stopped using his legally prescribed drugs and began self-medicating, trying various combinations of alcohol, antihistamines, and cough syrup. After a series of minor accidents, one of which involved a worker's compensation claim, he apparently began using marijuana, against the advice of his girlfriend, Aleta.

Aleta had waited DURING HIS YEARS IN THE MILITARY. Although they had planned to marry before he left, he put her off when he returned. They went to her church for counseling; the minister described Naropa as "withdrawn and uncommunicative" at this time.

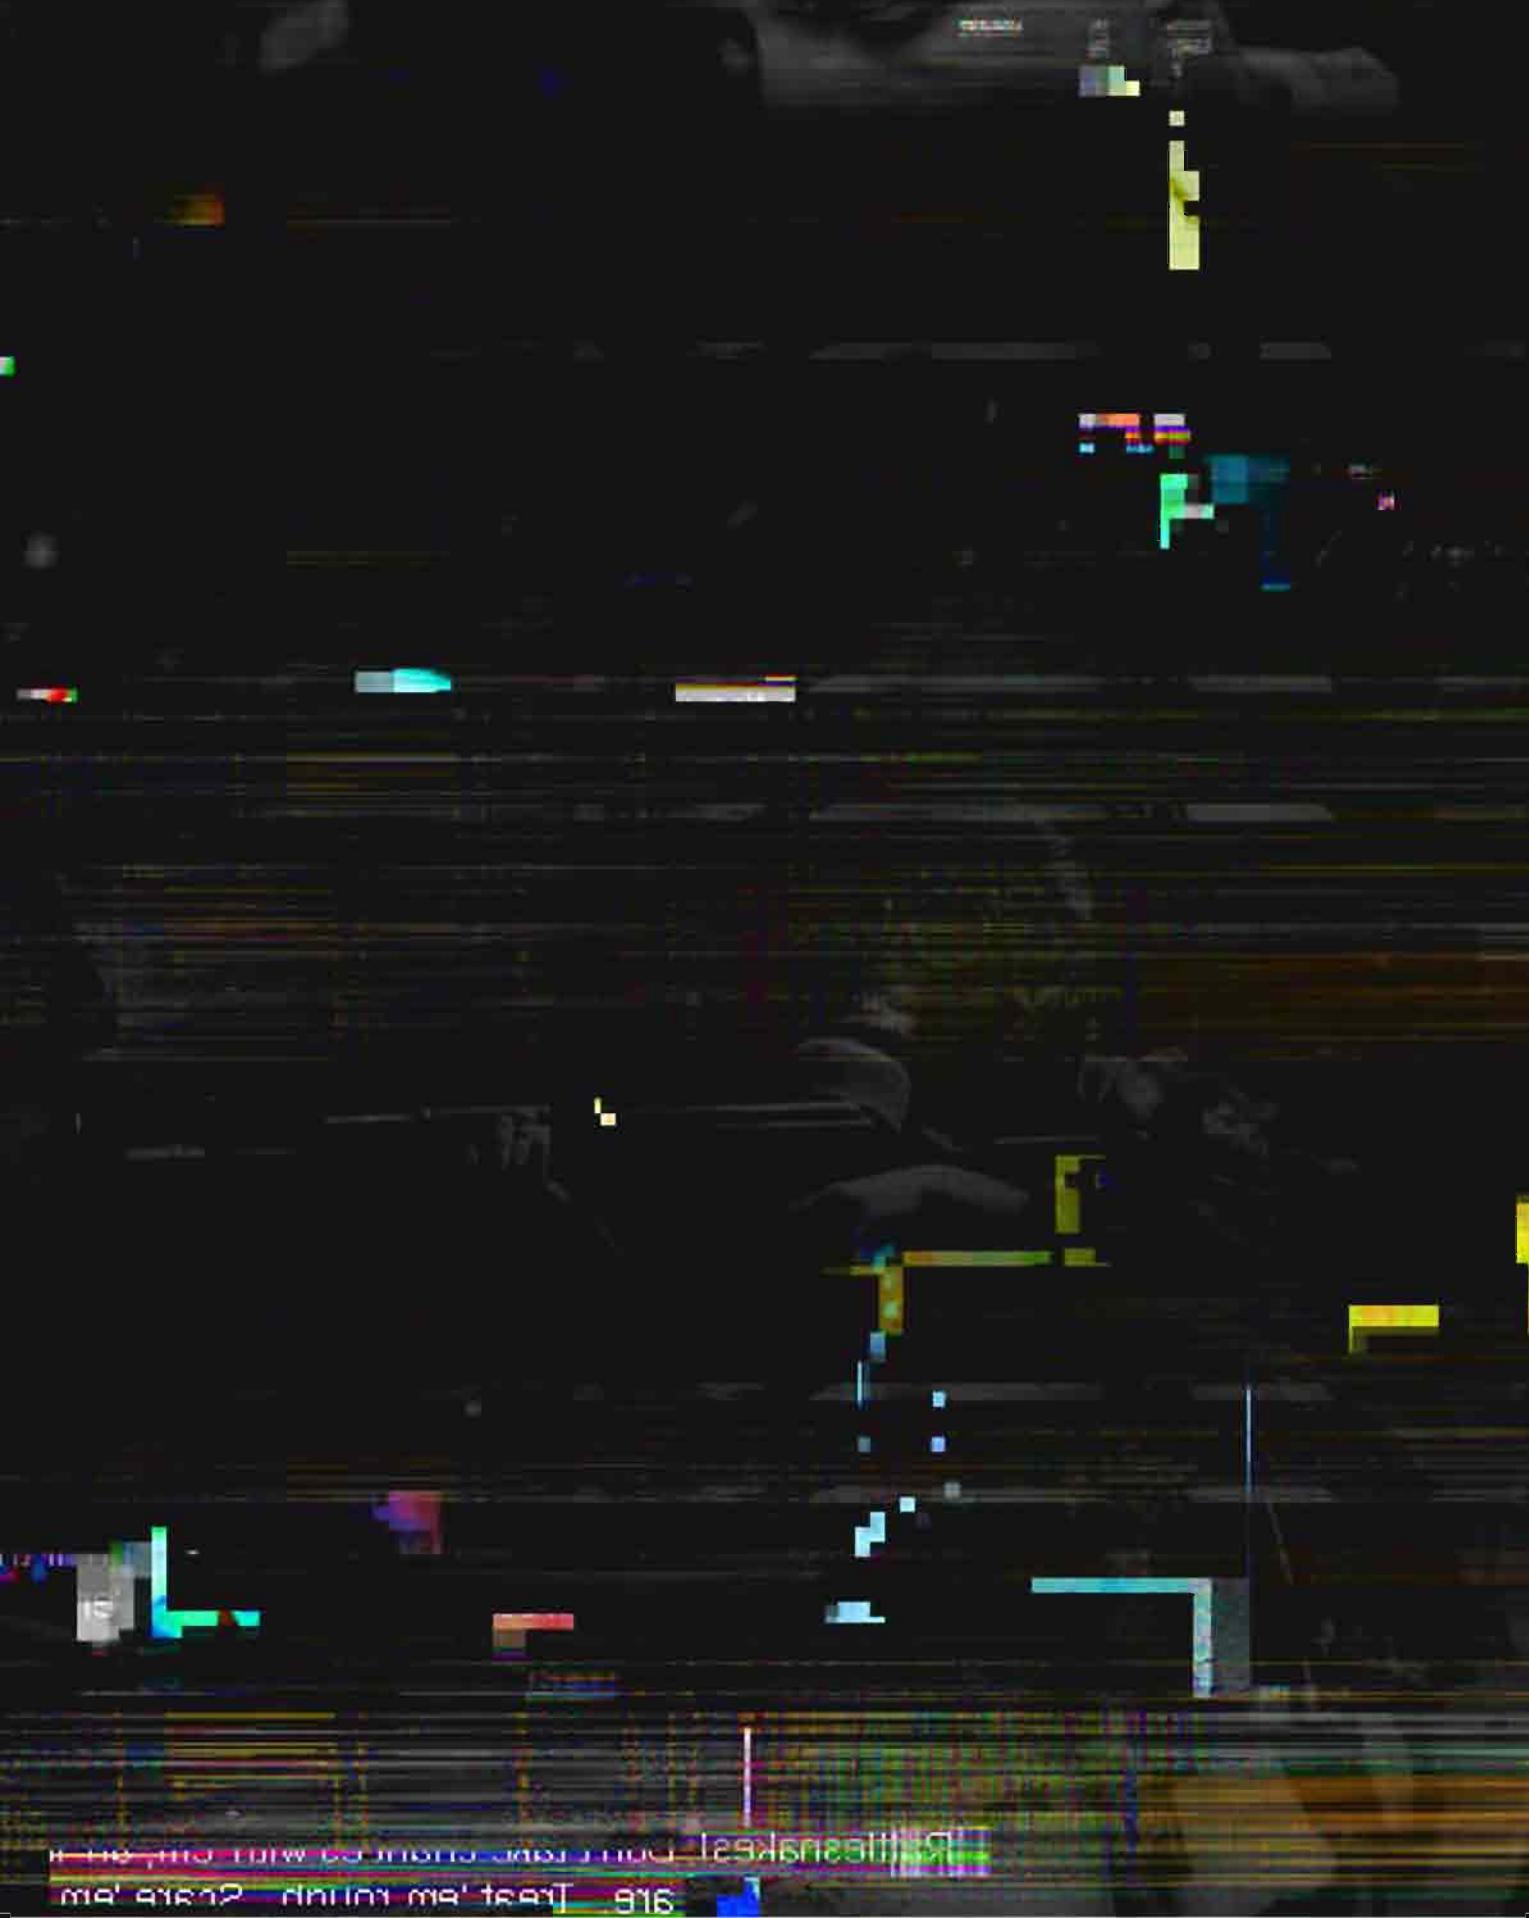

Despite the warnings of her family, Aleta came to stay at Naropa's apartment when an injury kept him off work for two weeks. DURING THIS TIME she told a sister that he was smoking marijuana almost constantly and appeared uninterested in sex. Aleta urged him to stop using illegal drugs. On her third request he apparently complied.

Two nights later he headed her with a combat knife and then sexually violated her corpse. The coroner's report described postmortem trauma to her stomach and esophagus.

The following morning, Naropa returned to the VA hospital where he killed two senior administrators and a senior physician before taking his own life.

WHAT HAPPENED TO Aleta is a tragedy, but could her death have been avoided if she had listened to the advice of family and faith?

Jamal Naropa thought he knew better than the medical establishment. Who should you trust?

THE PRICE OF TREASON

Every American is a soldier in this battle.

Unfortunately, as the terrorist events of the past twenty-one years have shown, the casualties in this war are mostly innocent civilians.

For Your Protection

JESSICA DELASKO worried about her daughter, Stefanie, who had progressed from night terrors as a small child to clinical depression as a teenager. When Stefanie was just 15, Jessica took her to a concert by her favorite singer/songwriter, defying clear BoM guidelines for minors since the concert was rated for ages 18 and older.

When Jessica's parenting score dropped as a result, she filed a complaint. She then refused to delete Stefanie's Mature-rated music files, and continued to allow her to download age-inappropriate material. She posted a barely passing grade in her parenting refresher course. When authorities came for an onsite inspection and asked to take Stefanie for a private examination, Mrs. Delasko resisted, injuring a Social Services worker and placing additional stress on her own daughter.

Stefanie had just begun to adjust to her new living arrangements when Jessica broke into the crèche school in a failed attempt to kidnap her daughter. The incident traumatized Stefanie, who subsequently hanged herself on the crèche playground three weeks later.

Jessica walked into a Social Services office the following day wearing a vest of dynamite. After saying, "This is for Stefanie," she detonated the explosives.

Clarice Hornshaw, mother of three, and Annabel Losado, who was due to have her first child the following month, were among those killed.

The warnings are there for your protection. Take them seriously.

The Slow Slide Into Treason

The era leading up to 9/11 was characterized by relativism and amorality, where morality was defined socially rather than God, and the result was a slippery slope. In Neil Czemo it led to tragic consequences.

In 2001, Czemo started a website called OpenSourceResistance. It asked people to make messages subverting American values and spread them around; to commit political acts and document them.

The acts it documented were often little more than pranks, things that some people would say were not harmful in any meaningful way. The events of the Hollywood bombing changed all that. When it came to light that the terrorists had been using graffiti tagger Waylon Quine to collect photos of their targets (with their infamous list of 'challenge tags' texted to his cellphone), society understood it could no longer see subversive art as a harmless kind of 'blowing off steam.' When he ~~REMOVED THE~~ website down, Neil was arrested and sentenced to two years.

A Wasted Second Chance

Upon release, Czemo told authorities he was living a lawful life. In fact, he was secretly involved in the world of underground music. He began producing podcasts, shooting guerrilla videos, and publishing websites accusing the government of censorship and authoritarianism. In '86 he tricked an intermediary into slipping anti-American propaganda into a news broadcast.

From here he went into exile, living Europe for years. While American soldiers were fighting and dying around the world to defend our way of life, Czemo traded on Continental anti-Americanism to make himself a minor celebrity. Like Moore and others, he financed a dissolute lifestyle by putting out a series of ever-more fanciful attacks on the United States. With the 1983 bombing of Mather and the attempted terrorist attack on Seattle, the true threat of the I.A became impossible to ignore. Czemo's mainstream support dwindled, leaving him broke and friendless.

What Goes Around, Comes Around

Denied work permits in the European Union, Czemo learned the cost of social isolation the hard way. When his wife contracted ovarian cancer, this "fearless social rebel" had the effrontery to come to the French government begging for access to public health care. In the aftermath of the Algerian bombings at the Louvre, this was of course denied.

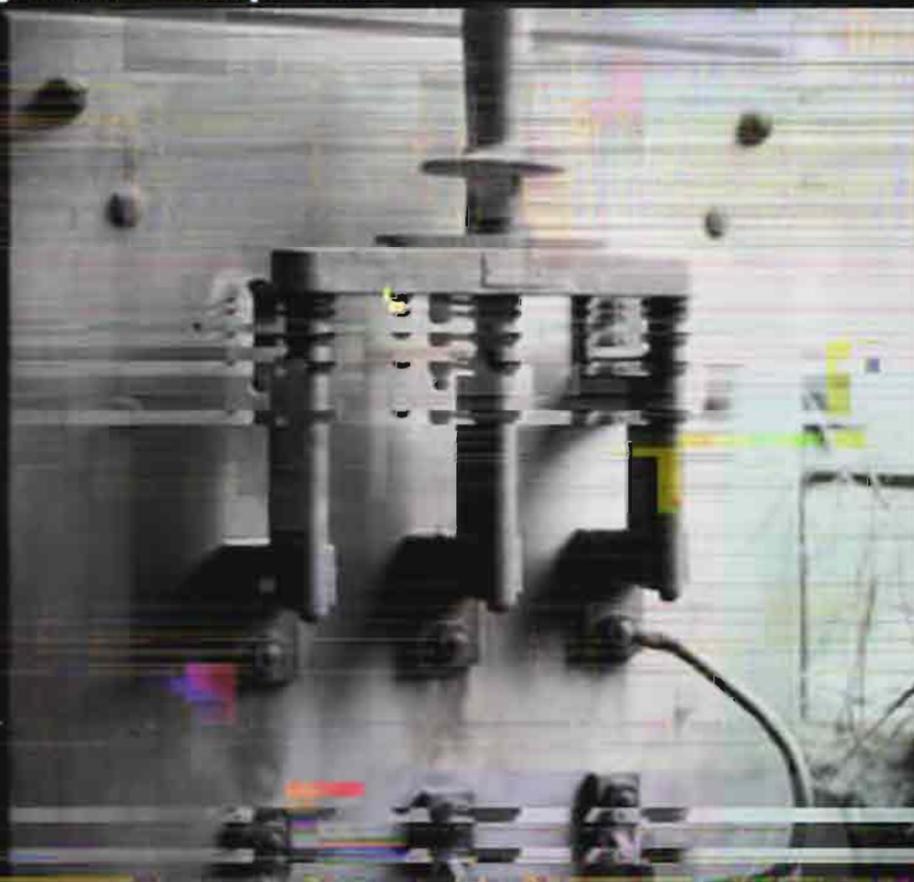

Given yet another chance to return to the United States and seek a plea-bargain that might possibly save his wife's life, he reacted instead with paranoid suspicion. He showed his true colors, sending off jihadist factionaries in a desperate bid to find another free ride. Even they viewed him with contempt.

The End of the Road

On January 10, 2000, the free world took a giant step forward in its united effort to face the perils of terrorism and join together for the efficient stewardship of the earth's precious natural resources. In this new climate of unity, French authorities collected Czemo's daughter from her school and required him to surrender his visa. The extradition hearings were brief and to the point, and on January 15th Czemo found himself back on US soil for the first time in 8 years.

He was executed FEBRUARY 4, 2000.

Let's face it, it's always fun to challenge authority. You don't have to be responsible in your facts. Being a rebel is always cool...

...but in the end, does being 'cool' seem worth the price?

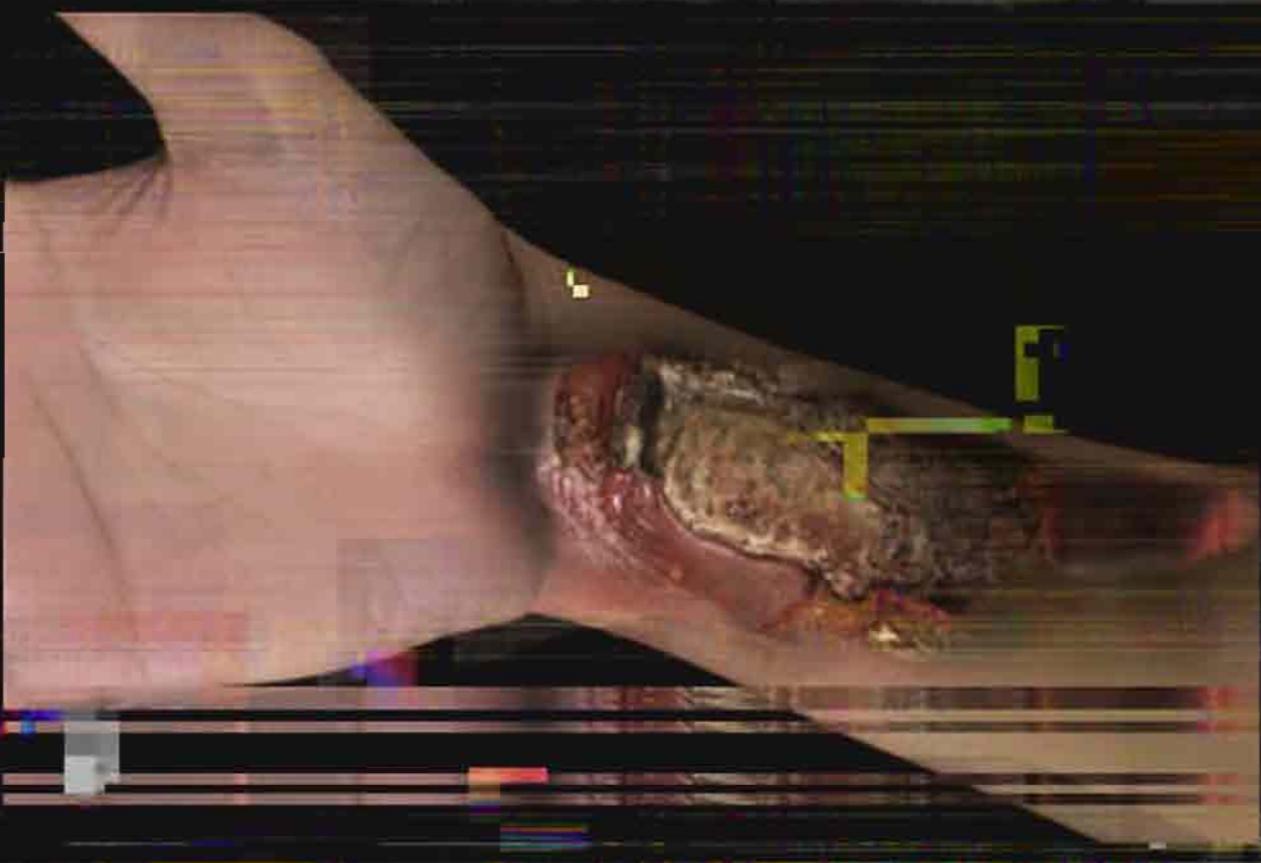

THE END. HOW COULD I NOT HAVE TO SAY IT AGAIN?

A Helping Hand

Evie Parra, 20, runs a side business to help her 'kids.' A trained nurse, she extracted → nerochips from young adults who wanted to cross state lines when their driving record restricted them. She had a 50 mile radius of their home. She felt they should be allowed to see their families in Mexico or their friends in Kansas.

One of the young men who came to her for a nerochip extraction had an antibiotic resistant Staphylococcus Infec~~tion~~ from his aborted attempt to remove it himself. In her Friday night 'clinic session' she extracted 16 nerochips. Four of the people ~~she extracted~~ chips from died because they were afraid to seek medical help until it was too late. Of the others, one lost his hand, two others suffered massive systematic infections which resulted in lifelong organ damage.

How "helpful" is it to help someone break the law?

The Devil's Playground

Cordell Singh was smart and bored. With two parents working, he had hours of unsupervised time to kill after school every day. It's surprising he found himself drawn to a crowd of older kids. To gain their approval, he delivered packages and picked up deliveries at a P.O. box. When he discovered he was relaying subversive material, they told him that he would go to prison as an accessory if he told anyone. He chose to trust them.

Three years later he delivered a homemade bomb to the Mall of America. It went off as he was putting it in a trash can, killing him and WOUNDING 80 OTHERS. This time he had brought his young brother, Elroy Singh, into the group. Elroy, now 15, is serving a life sentence in prison.

If you are a working parent, ask yourself what your child needs more—a few extra dollars, or a parent at home?

If your friends ask you to become involved in something you think might be illegal, ask yourself if you're really willing to die to be one of the 'in-group.'

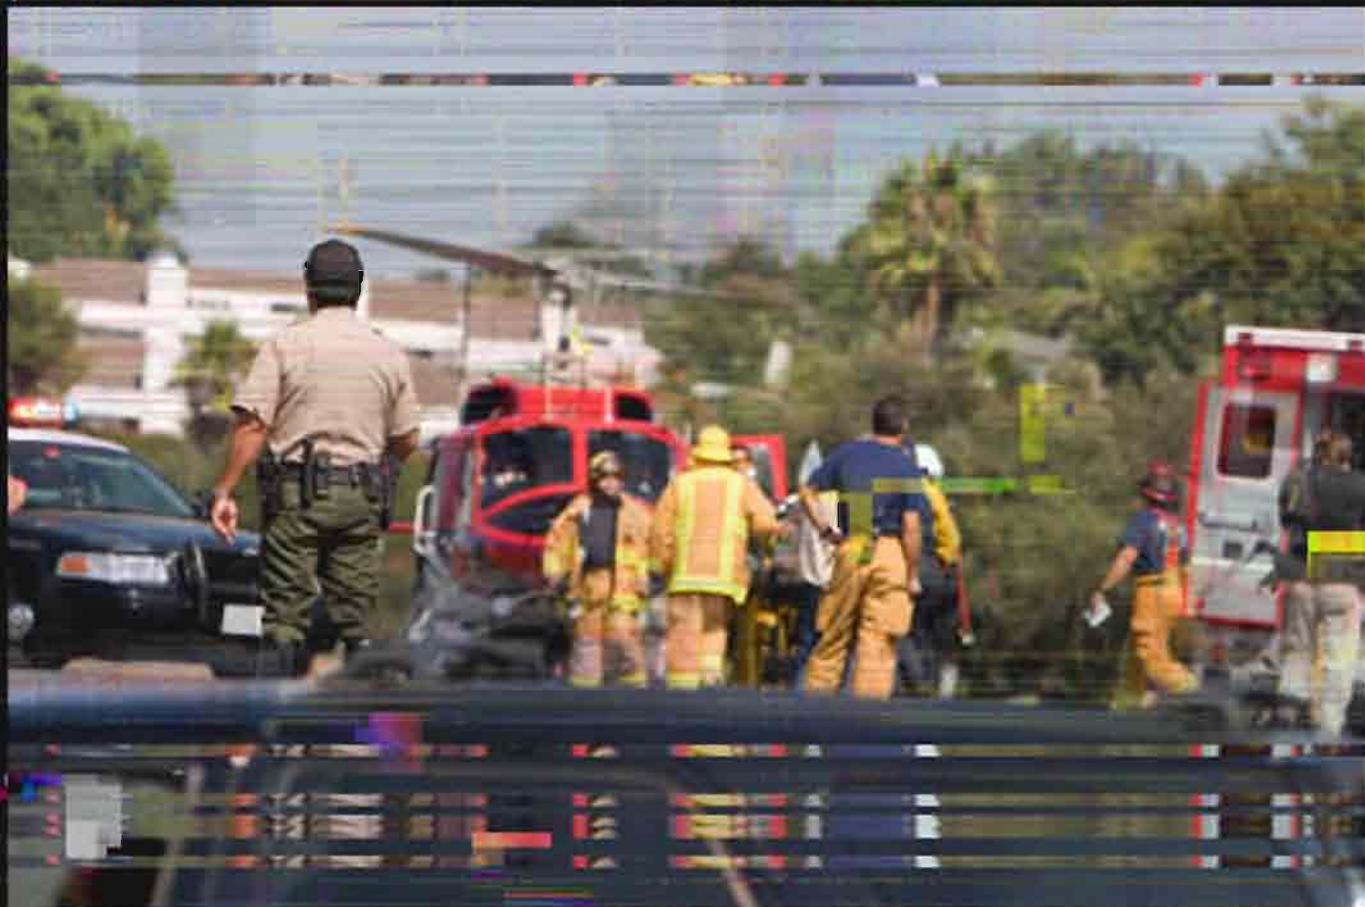

Ask yourself if innocent people deserve to die because you weren't brave enough to make an anonymous phone call to the authorities.

It Was Only A Joke

Chaz Greber was an engineering student at Duke who became involved in subversive politics. When he called in a bomb threat to the power plant during a heat wave, his description of the explosion and probable effect of the supposed explosives alarmed authorities enough they had to shut the plant down while bomb squads went in to check the premises.

Over the next two days, as Durham sweltered without air conditioning or refrigeration, eight Americans died, including senior citizens and one infant. Hundreds more suffered from heat prostration and food poisoning because Chaz thought it would be funny to play a prank on the authorities.

Chaz Greber was executed by lethal injection early this year.

Resistance "radio broadcast" includes voice recording of events during police raid on muslim terrorists in Michigan.

Peter: Police in Michigan today launched a daring daylight raid on the compound of a Muslim cleric with links to Post-Iranian suicide brigades. Joyce Pearson is a spokesperson for the Saginaw police department.

Joyce Pearson: Our money-for-jaws program is paying off. We received a tip that a well-known Muslim dissident had not only attended services at a mosque in Saginaw, but (sadly?) he consulted the Imam on so-called charitable fund raising.

Peter: But what that really means is funneling money to terrorists, right Joyce?

Joyce Pearson: Well, Peter, that's why we decided to investigate.

Unknown Voice: So the cops are breaking up another dangerous terrorist cell, right? Only there was a kid in the fucking room when the S.W.A.T. team busted in. And she was on a cell phone. I got that file and now so do you. Here's another version of the truth.

Girl on phone: Uh, I don't know. Just watch TV I guess. You can come over if you want. I mean, I'm not going to do anything else...

sound of SWAT members breaking in

SWAT members: Get down on the floor! Get down, get down! DOWN!

Unknown voice: I'm down! I'm down!

SWAT member 1: One male, some kid. Looks like the son. Your dad runs a mosque.

The son: He's the Imam.

SWAT member: And we know he's supposed to have a very important meeting today. Who is that with?

The son: I don't know.

SWAT member: We have video of a known radical at the last service, so I'm asking you again, who is he meeting?

The son: I don't know, asshole.

SWAT member: What did you say? You got something to say to me, punk? Huh? Say it now, say it again! Say what you said! *Sounds of someone being beaten*

Girl on phone (in background): No! Stop! *Cries* He didn't do-

The son: Look! The fucking Sunday school strangler went to the Church of Plano, nobody arrested his-

SWAT member: You're a liar!!! Where's your dad?

Sounds of SWAT member beating the son, a number of screams

Girl on phone (in background): Don't, don't! He didn't do anything! Please stop!

SWAT member: Where is your dad? Hey! Hey! Look at me!

Girl on phone (in the background): He's... *Cries*

SWAT member: Shit. Hey, kid! Hey! Can you hear me?

Radio sounds in background

SWAT member (on radio): One juvenile male assaulting an officer. He was subdued. We're going to need an EMT, no hurry.

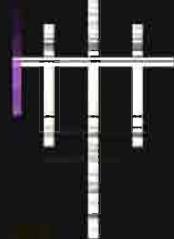

rumbling sounds

Peter: One arab was killed in a raid when he attacked police officers with a knife.

Police believe he may have been on drugs.

In times of turmoil, God's faithful turn to Him. Join other believers for prayer, discussion, and fellowship as we seek God's guidance. We will also be taking up collections for ten-year-old Tyler Chapman and the Barnet family, who have taken him in.

PASTORAL SUPPORT will be present to answer questions.

Individuals who feel they have had "experiences" with the Presence are strongly encouraged to contact Pastor Johnson directly for prayer support and one-on-one counseling.

When: Monday through Friday

7:30am-10:00am & 5:00pm-7:30pm

Where: Special Saturday Meeting, 12:00pm-6:00pm
Fellowship Hall

Prayer Requests:

Tyler Chapman - That God would give him peace
the Barnetts - that God would give them strength our Nation - that God would strengthen our faith and protect us from bloodshed

This Week's Sermon:

Sunday, February 13

Morning Sermon: "Modern Authority, Part 4: Whoever Resists the Authority Resists God" – Romans 13:1-7

Pastor Johnson concludes our ~~four-part~~ study of dealing with authority in the modern world. In his letter to the Romans, Paul gave enduring wisdom about the Believer's relationship with civil authority. Come learn what God's Word says about "civil disobedience", ~~taxes~~, and other important issues.

Evening Sermon: "He Shall Wash His Feet in the Blood of the Wicked"
– Psalm 58

Pastor John continues our journey through the Psalms as we explore the vivid images and holy anger of Psalm 58. In trying times, God's people can say with confidence, "Surely there is a reward for the righteous; surely He is God who judges in the earth."

Resistance “radio broadcast” about the street drug Opal and its effect on the drug trade in Columbia.

Reporter: The DEA announced a crushing victory over Colombian drug cartels. A correspondent reports that a combined military force has closed down another drug operation run by the notorious Saenz brothers, long-time leaders of the Colombian drug cartel and paramilitary warlords fighting to control central Colombia.

British Female: Look, nobody's saying that Carlos Saenz wasn't a complete and utter psychopath. But you know, I'm here. And you ask people around there, and they'll tell you global warming has wiped out the Colombian drug trade, not the fucking DEA. Posting this from Vieta, Colombia. Here's another version of the truth.

Cuando era una niña, las cosas no eran fáciles. Pero ahora, un año llueve y llueve. Todavía ni sacamos las hojas de coca, y ya se pudren. Dicen que es por el calentamiento de la tierra. Hace 2 años, el río se llevó la casa de mi hermano, se llevó a mi hermano, su esposa, mi sobrino, y a la bebé. La encontramos cubierta de lodo, y donde se secó, parecía ceniza. El año pasado fue difícil, pero los hombres que compran las hojas de coca, nos dijeron sembrar lo que pudieramos. Lo hicimos y se lo llevaron. Esperamos y esperamos, finalmente nos dijeron que no nos podían pagar, que ya nadie quería comprar hojas de coca. Shh Shh. Callate hijita mía.. Que linda.. Este año las lluvias volvieron y no se pudo sembrar. Ahora dice la gente que nadie compra las hojas de coca. Ya no le vale a nadie. Aún en Bogotá sólo se quiere Opalo. Se compra Opalo en los Estados Unidos y se lo trae a Bogotá... Opalo...

[ENGLISH TRANSLATION]

When I was a little girl, things weren't easier. But now, in a year it keeps raining and raining. We haven't taken out the coca leaves yet, and they're already rotting. They say that it's because of the global warming. Two years ago, the river took my brother's home, took my brother, his wife, my nephew, and the baby.. We found her covered in mud, and where it was dry, it looked like ashes. Last year was difficult, but the men who buy the coca leaves said to us to sow what we could.. We did it and they took it. We hoped and we hoped, finally they said to us that they could not pay us, that nobody wanted to buy coca leaves anymore. Shh Shh. Calm down my daughter... How pretty... This year the rains returned and it was not possible to sow. Now the people say that nobody buys the coca leaves anymore. It's not longer worth it to anybody. Still in Bogota, they only want Opal. Opal is bought in the United Estates and brought to Bogota... Opal...

Female: Here in Colombia the people say nobody even buys coca anymore. It's all Opal. Even in Bogota, it's Opal. Shipped in from America.

Reporter: Speaking from a compound on Pennsylvania Ave, a presidential spokesperson thanked God and the brave soldiers of the DEA for this astonishing raid, which he called a knockout punch to the already bloody face of the drug lords.

Female: What a load of bullshit. Your tax dollars at work America...

 Re: Officer Reference Handbook

Opal:

Opal (hyocephalitamyn) Opal is commonly distributed as a black liquid. The most potent and efficient form of ingestion is intravenous. Opal conveniently comes in a small glass "I-VIAL" - a 1.5" small glass cylinder about the diameter of a small drinking straw with a red cap on each end. Removing the cap on one end reveals a ready-to-insert 1/4" sterile needle, the other end reveals a trigger to release the pressurized contents directly into the bloodstream.

In middle and upper class populations, users drop or inject into the eye. This temporarily turns the whites of the eyes black.

Although most Opal users are standard drug abusers, a sizable minority feel that the drug produces a special, quasi-religious experience.

"Opal is an extraordinary visionary awakening. It is not a recreational drug. It produces a profoundly introspective state of awareness that is useful for meditation, contemplation, and self-reflection. Its effects are unique and cannot be compared with the effects of other drugs. In the right setting, if you are prepared, Opal is a shamanistic drug that will broaden your mind so you can experience a bigger totality of experience. Occasionally, opal users will experience the dark side of that totality and feel the rage of God from man's greed and short-sightedness. Users have reported that they felt diseased. Or that they felt the presence of a larger being, holding them accountable for the sins of humanity against the planet."

Opal can produce euphoric and hallucinogenic effects. In addition, it may generate many of the same toxic effects seen with other stimulants such as cocaine. Many US emergency departments

(EDs) now treat as many opal-intoxicated patients as methamphetamine-intoxicated or cocaine-intoxicated patients. Changes in mood, excitation, motor movements, sensory perception, and appetite appear to be mediated by central dopaminergic alterations. Serotonin alterations contribute to the amphetamine-related mood changes and psychotic behavior. Organic compounds stimulating limbic centers cause dream-like hallucinations.

From: Opalescent Haze, an "underground" web site that has been allowed to run to provide law enforcement with a resource to identify users. Like heroin, cocaine or methamphetamine users, opal users are a naturally self-limiting population regulated primarily by disease, overdose and the toxic effects of life style and drug abuse. Most will probably either 'get clean' in a bout five to ten years or die. However, since they are obviously guilty of drug abuse and subversive browsing, users from the site can usually be coerced into providing intelligence and information on other users and criminals they are in contact with.

Resistance "radio broadcast" with voice commentary by the sniper behind the Wrigley Field shooting and bio-terrorism attack.

Angry Sniper: Test, Test. In the old days if you shot a government spokesman at least you knew it would get on TV. There was more than one media outlet; like, they competed to cover news. Today, you have to start with something that the administration has to broadcast.

[Footsteps, television turns on]

TV Reporter 1: ... go to the top of the sixth. Now he's trailing by a run. St. Louis: 3, Cubs: 2.

Angry Sniper: Step one: Grab as much attention as you can for as cheap as you can.

TV Reporter 1: ... Felch misses up the fast ball.

TV Reporter 2: ... Did you see that commercial we did for the president? He had been thinkin' of me?

TV Reporter 1: ... I did. Christ...

[TV audio continues under Angry Sniper's speech]

Angry Sniper: I was gonna buy a little Helio something that I could remote control, but it was gonna cost me six grand. So, I found a pilot. I offered him 500 bucks to fly a banner. We loaded one saying "Marry me, Irene." When he left I doubled back, I switched it out for one that said "THIS IS A BOMB FUCKHEADS, WAKE THE FUCK UP."

[A plane is heard flying overhead]

TV Reporter 1: ... Some kind of small plane seems to be flying over the stadium. Towing a message... Maybe a message of love. That is no message of love, that's bad...<indistinct>no, don't point your cameras up there...

Angry Sniper: K, I called the authorities 5 minutes ago and I told them the pilot was a civilian; if they shoot him down that'll be on them.

TV Reporter 1: <under Angry Sniper> ...keep your cameras on the field...

Angry Sniper: Step 2: Deliver the message. I got a job at the park as a beer guy... I needed the money and hey, free beer. Can't pass up anything free in this country. Free this. I poured beer out of six of the mini keg size and put a small explosive charge. I packed each keg with pamphlets saying "your government is poisoning you" and latex balloons full of silver nitrate. It's easy to make and cheap as shit. Before the game I put the special kegs in trash-cans all around the upper level.

[Explosions can be heard, screams of terror]

TV Reporter 1: ... Oh god, go back. That's a bomb motherfucker. Oh god, it just went up in here! There's glass everywhere!

Unknown Man 1: Yeah, Yeah, Yeah. No, no wait. Oh shit, her skin is turnin' shit brown.

Angry Sniper: I rented an apartment on the other side of Waveland Avenue. Made it back in plenty of time to set up my bipod and scope.

Unknown Man 2: Where you been asshole? Get on the fucking P.A. or something. Fucking calm 'em, ya dickhead!

Angry Sniper: I used to be a sniper, 105th airborne crusaders, AMEN.

On TV: Ladies and Gentleman, Wrigley Field has apparently been the victim of a terrorist attack. The important thing is for everyone that can hear my voice to remain calm!

[sound of the clanking and cocking of a gun]

Angry Sniper: Hollow points have stopping power in close, but they give you more air resistance at long range, less reliable. This range I use a light 50 with PMG steel jackets, pricey, but...sometimes the cost of liberty is 92 dollars a box.

On TV(2): You, whoever you are you ragheaded asshole the cops are going to find you, and they are going to waste your skinny brown asses! You hear me motherfucker!?

On TV: Listen, the important thing is that America will not give in to these cowardly actions of violence...

[sound of walking on wood]

Angry Sniper: Step three: punishment. These people need to know if they get on camera and they lie to America, they are going to pay a price.

On TV(2): ... When we find you guys, as god is my witness-

A vicious sniper shot rings out from the apartment

On TV(2): ... Oh Jesus... Christ... Someone shot him in the head...[a bullet casing hits the ground]... get us off the air.

[The TV emergency system cuts on and then the TV is flipped off. Emergency vehicles are heard outside]

Angry Sniper: Bible thumpers in suits and thugs who raped and killed America; we're gonna sit there and watch them hump the corpse. A nation that sees them for what for what they really are is the only thing that these fuckers understand, force is the only fucking language they understand. It's not about money, it's not about money, it's not about firepower. It's about finding the will to act. A credit card and a hardware store can make you a hero. You can save America if you have the will.

DEDICATION

You have reached the 105th Airborne Crusaders, the unofficial sanctioned website dedicated to members of the 105th -- the proudest unit in the service of protecting and policing god's green earth.

John Fellstone, MSGT (Ret'd)

I can see it from the roof of my house.

GuyS, IF THIS is the end, it's been an honor.

HISTORY

Officially stood up on a morning in September, -13 BA, the 105th Airborne soldiers was part of our nation's swift answer to the ~~attack~~ in Los Angeles. The unit was formed from those former-Airborne soldiers who felt in their hearts call of the Lord in the voice of our great nation's Commander-in-Chief.

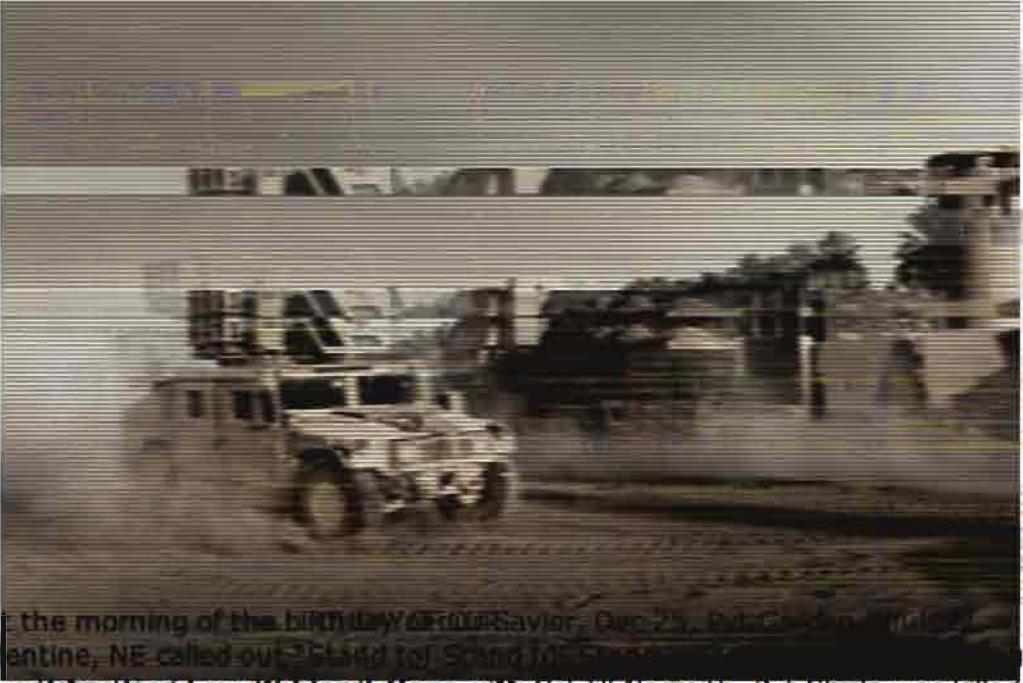

It was at ~~time~~ ~~it~~ a total difference in thinking and a new vision for what the "best of the best" really meant. It wasn't just about speed and strength. It was about finding those men and women who kept a personal relationship with our Savior the Lord Jesus Christ and allowed the Holy Ghost to guide their rifles true.

After a grueling physical, mental and spiritual selection process, those who remained would first go to Fort Campbell, KY, and then on to the eventual units. FOR THE 105TH, we shipped out to a temporary field base on an acreage donated by the congregation of the New Evangelical CHURCH OF SHEPHERDSVILLE, KY.

For the first time in our active service, our faith became the sword instead of just the shield. It was time for the blind justice to fall before the light. These standards high and the world had been found wanting. The 105th would be THAT SHARPENED SWORD.

Few of the 105th were strangers to combat, most of us having come from active tours with the 101st Eagles. We shipped out for our first tour as a new unit without leaving a single REMF behind us -- the good Christians of New EGYPTIAN BULGE were for the newly constructed Fort Paul during our six months of vigilance in southern Syria.

But the morning of the birthday of our Savior - Dec. 25, 2001, Cpl. Eddie Shula, Valentine, NE, called out to God for Schema 10 - ~~the~~ ~~rounds~~ ~~baptized~~ ~~us~~ ~~with~~ ~~blood~~. Along with Cpl Jill Nasmith, Pvt Shula was killed that day, taken by the enemies of Jesus Christ in a dead and barren land that cried out for the justice we tried to bring to an ungrateful people.

Since then, the 105th has seen action in Yemen, Chad, Kashmir, former-Iraq, post-Iraq and Turkey. For the unit's bravery in continuing to quash Kashmir extremists up until the very moment nuclear exchanges were confirmed imminent, the President awarded the 105th the Presidential Unit Citation.

MEMORIES

I'VE RECEIVED A LOT OF LETTERS over the years that the 105th has been stood up. Below are a few of the stand-outs, reprinted with permission of the author and state sanction.

On Post-Iraq

First night on the ground after the [redacted] strike, Lt tagged the section for night [redacted] with each [redacted] going [redacted] account of all the nuked sand-glass. There was still some enemy but since most of them didn't have bunny suits, their evil was starting to show. The section was a good bunch of boys. Buddy had your back and God had his so we were in good shape.

But SATAN'S GOT THIS WAY AS [redacted] as every good Christian knows and he can throw one heck of a wrench in the works. A big fellow called "Badland," he had the M60 and was good at getting a beaten batch down PDQ. Pvt Bunde had [redacted] and got out a warning for cover [redacted] the shooting started.

[redacted] told me Badland was hit. God forgive me but at first I just minded because I could still hear the M60 rammering away. Then I realized that Badland wasn't firing bursts anymore - he was cycling through the whole belt.

I got over to Badland but saw the blood before I was in position. His belt was [redacted]

I ripped the disintegrating link to kill the M60 and took stock. Squad fought harder and God held their rifles true and the fire fight was over quickly enough. Badland had been taken by [redacted] and [redacted] firing, so one side of his head and collarbone was smashed up pretty bad. He was a mess, BUT Bless my boy if he didn't smile and say, "Sarge, God has me. You've got the patrol." He passed out from the pain then and we treated him best we could before evac pulled him out.

I send Bunde out with him and the rest of the section carried on and completed our mission. We know [redacted] what Badland would have wanted. BUT ONCE WE GOT back, I'm not ashamed to admit that the six of us left got down on our knees and prayed together and cried together that the Lord would let us have Badland for a while yet before He saw fit to take him.

CSM told me later that he had never seen a stronger fight on his table and Badland had won that fight with God's love and our prayers. Even on that day, all off-duty Crusaders report for prayer duty when EVERYONE else has a tough case to work on. Together, we stay strong to fight another day.

Violent resistance manifesto from a disturbed verteran.

last update 2/2/0000

I kill people.

start there. everything else is posturing.

I killed people in post-Iran after we dropped the bomb on Tehran. They told me I was protecting America.

This is a war. The government of the United States has declared and is fighting a war against the people of the United States and people all over the world.

I kill people. That's what war is.

When I say government of the United States is at war with you this is not propaganda. I know because I was them. I was the guy who broke down your door at four AM and did things to you with pliers until we knew the names of your friends.

Understand this situation. Resistance to this government—in any way—is not an act of free speech or a way to make your voice heard or a chance to impress your friends with your principles. Resistance is treason and they will kill you for it.

That will only change if they lose the war. Losing a war happens when one side has suffered so much that they no longer have the will to fight. Use of parapsin and neurochips and fear—especially fear—we are currently losing that will to fight. We are losing the war.

Suffering is the point. Terrorism is not enough to be willing to die for your country. You must be willing to kill for your country as well. That is what war means.

I kill people. So should you.

Axiom: On Passive Resistance

In the 20th century the war for civil liberties in America was fought against a democratically elected government under constant pressure from public opinion and a free media.

Passive resistance worked in the last war.

This government is not elected. This government controls public opinion through its own media.

In this America, passive resistance is suicide.

small town. no ~~JOBS~~. I WANTED TO MATTER. i believed what they told me. what did I know back then?

what do you know now?

Them

the parepin makes you intelligent, but kills aggression. different soldiers get different pills to put it back. regulars get little blue ones—we call them “die-agra.” blue pills keep you frosty and get your soldier on. blue pills are fun.

sometimes, if you’re good at your job, they give you red pills. the red ones are called “blisters” or “bloody mary” or “jerk” red pills erase the line between killing and fucking. SOME OF THE DAMAGE IS PERMANENT. your family, you can’t go back once you’ve taken the red pills. they told us that part afterwards.

listen to me

some of the things I remember didn’t happen but this one did.

aurora, illinois. night. 5 of us. cell of unregistered muslims with the ~~NATIONAL GUARD~~ stayed out of the air, walked it in sas style. ~~47 houses and buildings inside the first one—quiet, quiet, like santa claus. the next part very intimate, sudden and slippery. little gasps and sighs. towelling off and then the next house, the next, the next, and we don’t stop, never stop until the last hour is done, the sun comes up and our heads are slick, we’re sweating. I came four times~~ when your doorbell is open in the middle of the night, you need to know who is coming through it.

Efficiency

war is A BUSINESS. they know that. you need to.

Hypothetical: you charge the white house. they gun you down. nobody sees you are out of the game for the cost of a bullet.

never stop calculating and force. when they execute you, twitch when the needle goes in so the point breaks off and they have to use more needles in the electric chair so they have to pay 22 more needles to clean it up.

you can make a difference. a credit card and a hardware store can make you a hero but you have to use them efficiently.

CARVER: a tool

most people are surprised. data centers, comm centers and cafeterias often outscore tank compounds, small-arms lockers and command bunkers.

you are angry. you are scared. you want to be noticed, you want to kill, you WANT TO DIE. whatever.
THE TOOL IS OBJECTIVE and that's it.

informers

Hypothetically, you walk into AdCo. your buddy is on the phone, giving up an operation. They have his kids. he's trying to lie so they won't b&t the kids but they won't catch you either.

you must shoot him in the face.

If you can't, you were an idiot to get someone else involved.

If you can, you're just evil.

cellular structures to the last war. they have too many ways in to b&t us. AdCo's part of the foreseeable future we must be a nation of lone gunmen.

work alone. NEVER stop.

Interrogation

LISTEN TO ME. I did this. here are some things I know. you should know them too.

hypothetical: a we ~~background~~ catches the download of folk student music from a wild-type hotspot in a cafe. analyzing security video puts you there that day and I pick you up for questioning. you are prepared for questions about who you know and what you believe. I know that.

Connecting

Instead, I will ask a battery of open-ended questions like "What do you remember from childhood?" people tend to be visual, auditory or feelings-centred thinkers. I am waiting for you to say, "I remember the leaves changing colour" or "I remember the smell of leaves underfoot" or "I remember the smell of leaves burning as I walked to school."

I have been taught to ~~TRUe~~ myself to your frequency by active listening with phrases like "I see what you mean" or "I hear where you're coming from" or "I know how you feel." ~~you will feel like most cops are pigs but~~ you just click with me. you will become more likely to confide in me.

The Law of Reciprocity

If I'm changing you with murder but offer to get you a cup of coffee, you feel strangely compelled to give me something in return. If the only thing I want in return is a confession, I might just get it.

The Polygraph

half the parts of a polygraph don't do anything except make you nervous. if you aren't nervous enough, I will accidentally drop a heavy book or coffee mug behind you. I will apologize, then get down to business. THE MACHINE is not the lie detector. I am.

mallory

listen to me. LISTEN TO ME. I'm sitting on a metal folding chair in a catholic church basement. there's a liberatadora tied into another one of those cheap chairs, she's nineteen and righteous and spitting mad. she's got a cross hanging on a chain between her tits her name is mallory and she organized a ~~damn~~ ~~service~~ for young people where certain kinds of politics were a kind of foreplay between the beer first and the fucking afterwards.

I pull the uniform ~~out of~~ off her ~~on~~ and get her paper ~~paper~~ full of non-alcoholic punch. she's so scared she can't stop talking. at first it's mostly swearing at me. ugly words come out of her pretty mouth like shibafuwaefufufu. i like her but i also think about doing things to her. i don't talk much because people will give themselves to you if you wait long enough.

SHE'S TALKING ABOUT ~~ME~~ why now, what she was hoping for. she's talking about social justice and equality, she's talking about things she saw on a mission trip to ~~america~~ america, she's trying to make me understand and the thing is I *do* understand. her friends who never left home are too ~~narcissistic~~ ~~careless~~ care but six months away from the water supply has shaken her up. she is trying to convince me, now, the innocence of it is staggering and i want to say They are going to kill you, mallory, if you don't shut up, but she can't stop talking she's ~~passionate~~ ~~that way~~.

only time it ever got to me.

finally I told her to shut up that she was dead already that she was going to be stoned that they were going to pulp her young body with ~~knives~~ ~~knacks~~ what a waste.

still tied to that chair.

here's the funny part she made me cut off a lock of her hair I didn't want to I didn't want to take out my knife but I did it and it's still in my hand and my hand shook. made me swear ~~to~~ ~~and~~ keep it always and I did sometimes I stop to touch it while I'm writing THIS FOR YOU the only reason I am telling you this story is so you understand it's all a lie I don't give a damn about you I'm only pretending to care but you're dead and I'm going to tell her and we will never see each other again.

fuck I don't know why I bbbble

The Facts

Basically it's Bangladesh with a concealed carry law. Houses are being lost to mold infestation. Homeowners unable to sell are simply walking away and banks, unable to take on the properties, aren't even bothering to foreclose. The ship channel caught fire, there are mutant catfish in the bayous, and the City With No Zoning Laws is America's Fattest every other year. There are fire ants, black widows, killer bees, and mosquitoes bearing malaria, West Nile, and viral meningitis: and that was all in the 1990s.

It's a lot worse now.

Cairo has long suffered from a classic smog inversion—lack of air movement means that pollutants hang in the city. Now the second largest city in Africa and still rapidly growing, air pollution is estimated to kill between 10,000 and 25,000 of its residents a year. And this is only expected to get worse. Lead levels in the air are rising, as are mercury levels in the water, raising fears of Minamata disease, mercury poisoning, which causes severe neurological impairment and death.

Functionally, it's the fucking End of the Line

it's where they disappear you if you think too hard, talk too loud, forget to drink the water, remember to be free. My best friend from high school got sent there three years ago. My girlfriend is there now. Beaten, certainly. Raped, probably. Dead... I guess I hope so.

Ashes to ashes, zeros and ones.

Sooner or later they'll get me, too. They might pick me off with a Van Eck phreak, or catch me with a profiling algorithm, I suppose, but probably it will be something simple and stupid and ordinary: my landlady will overhear a phone call, or they'll put the squeeze on the 13 year old girl in the apartment next door after she downloads a song with Un-American Lyrical Content and in her guilt and panic she will turn me in for no reason at all, but it will be enough for them to break into my apartment and find my water filter.

They'll put me on a plane to Guam and nobody will ever hear from me again—except you. Because if you're reading this page, there's a good chance I will see you there.

Interview transcript

Charge: domestic terrorism, hate speech, subversive communications, etc.

Close of file update

3:18pm

Interviewer: You look thirsty. Have some water.

Subject: No thank you, ma'am

Interviewer: Ma'am! Good manners. I like that! Have some water.

Subject: I'm really not thirsty.

Interviewer: «silence»

Interviewer: You know and I know that you're going to have to drink this water. There's nothing in it that every man, woman, and child across the country isn't drinking.

Subject: Not every man, woman, and child.

Interviewer: Spunky.

Drink up. There you go! All of it. Good. You feel better, right?

Subject: No

Interviewer: Sure you do.

Subject: You're overestimating the absorption rate. It will take a couple of days for the Parepin to reach full effectiveness.

Interviewer: Fascinating.

Subject: Well, you should know better than I.

Interviewer: Me? I'm just a thug who looks good in Gucci. All that sciency stuff... pfft.

Subject: You should learn more about it.

Interviewer: I get by. Now, you were delightfully cooperative—wait, are you a little warm? I'm a little warm. Let me lower the thermostat.

Okay. Better. Where was I? Oh right. Let's talk a little about this website of yours.

Subject: Look, I'm not brave. I told the other guy everything this morning. I swear to you. I just want to go home.

Interviewer: Here, have some more water.

Subject: God, enough with the water! I'm not thirsty!

Interviewer: Jonathan—can I call you Jon? Jon! Drink the water!

Jon?

Jon, honestly, I like you, believe it or not. The guy you were talking to this morning? He doesn't like you so much. You don't want to see him—

Subject: Okay! Okay!

Travis

I met Tayna. I picked her up at about 11:00pm and I said I just wanted to get to know her so and I took her to the grocery because I thought, well I loved to go to the grocery at you know two in the morning. He loved that it was such a weird time. I hadn't done it in a long time. Since Gil disappeared if you want to know the truth. I didn't realize how much I thought of the grocery store as Gil's. We used to go as this big bachelor group with Laura playing Wendy to the lost boys.

Gil would ride the shopping carts. Buy weird shit. I'd be saying we were going to get kicked out.

They're still there, the night shoppers. The freaks the geeks the junkies and the prostitutes. We ran into a couple of drag queens and since I was wearing the heads up glasses and I could take a picture, I did. 'What are you looking at?' the one asked me and I got embarrassed and looked away and they hooted. Gil would have flashed them a smile and said something like 'Girls, you look fabulous' and for all I know we'd have ended up doing shots and a beer with them at some bar that was open at four in the morning for the third shift guys at the plant, us with a couple of beefy drag queens.

I may have gotten a little choked. Because he wasn't there. A new set of kids was there. And me. I was not one of them. I was some weird dude who didn't belong anywhere.

I told Tayna to stand there and I'd take her picture with the specs. She was about freezing to death in that skimpy top because of course the grocery store is cold. She'd left her jacket in the car.

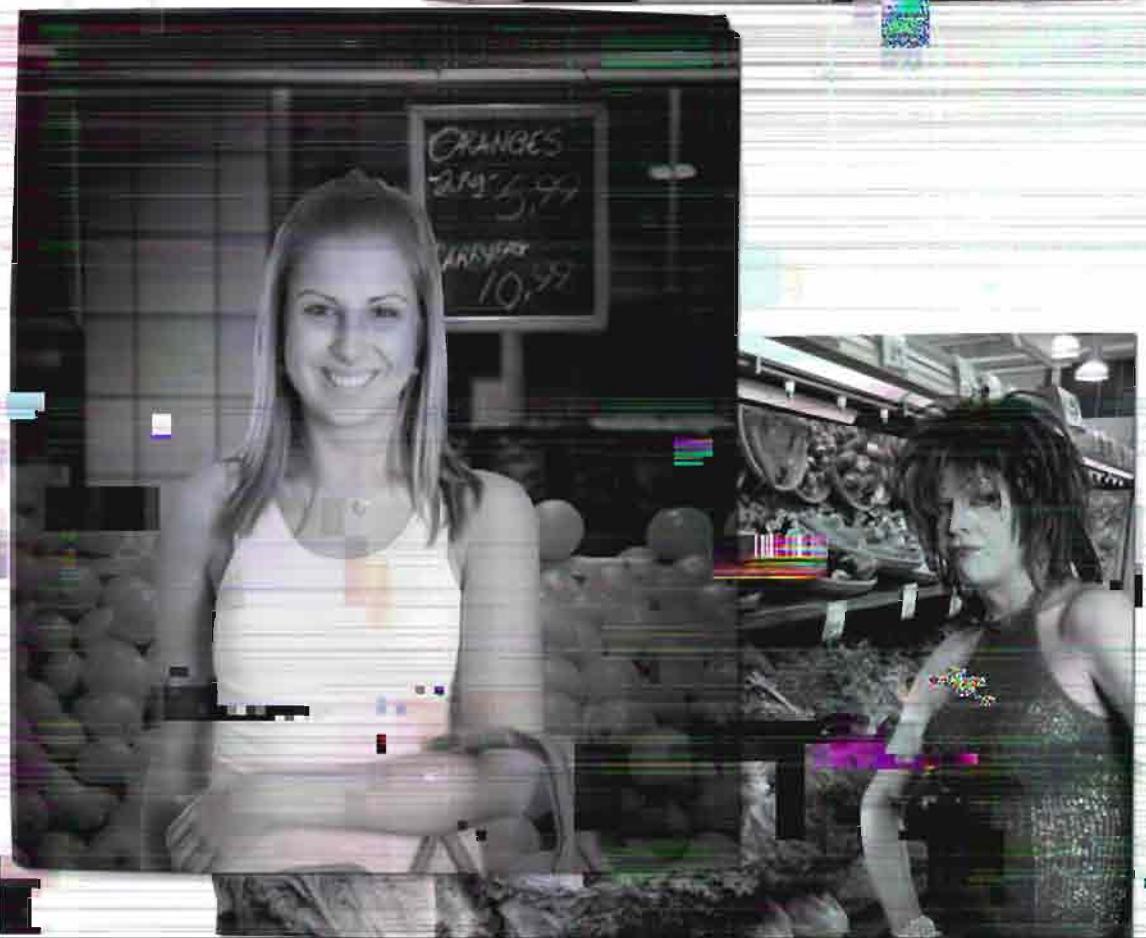

That's her, Travis.

She was a fucking secretary with a life and a boyfriend. I can just imagine your line of bullshit, the pressure, the sad stories about your son. Acting like you cared about her like you care about America. All you care about is getting even. Look at the girl you're willing to send to Exterminal on the off chance it might do some good to your precious revolution.

Take a good look.

I hope you can't sleep at night, you fucker.

City Vote to Restrict Use of Traffic Cameras

Jan 6, 0000

In a 7 to 4 vote yesterday, City Council decided to reduce the number of traffic cameras downtown to less than 200, all of which will be concentrated at intersections. The measure is expected to reduce costs by as much as $15,000 per year.

Duncomb says that the city has spent in excess of $20,000 cleaning and replacing cameras. "There are over 1,000 cameras in the downtown and people are voting with spray cans," he says. "I think the cameras have a place in intersections where they can be legitimately used for traffic control."

City cameras were brought to the public eye by a stunt last July. Downtown commuters coming to work saw about 120 traffic cameras covered in streamers or spray painted with balloons attached. The cameras were all out of commission for several hours as city workers removed the streamers and cleaned the paint off the camera lenses.

"I never realized there were so many of them," said Jo Ickert. "You can't go anywhere without being on one."

Although City officials explained that the cameras were used to control crime as well as traffic, the public backlash was unexpected.

Travis Woodgate brought suit against the city, alleging that giving speeding tickets based on evidence from a camera is unconstitutional. Judge Casey Solera found that use of the cameras violated a state law with conflicting burdens of proof of guilt. People received tickets simply because they were the registered owner of the motor vehicle.

The Judge said that by requiring the driver to prove someone else was driving the car at the time of the violation, the ordinance "stood the presumption of innocence and the burden-of-proof requirement on their heads."

The city appealed and the ruling was overturned. But City Councilman Lenny Duncomb proposed a motion to restrict downtown surveillance to intersections. "I'm all for safety," he says, "but people feel that there are too many cameras and that they are invasive."

Since that time, however, cameras have been less systematically defaced or destroyed. Several people have been caught by other cameras. The city police believe that none of those arrests are linked with the original crime.

Diary of a Revolutionary

By Elliot R. Carralig'

I sit in my room typing this, with the typewriter bell signalling the end of every line because it is unsafe to use a computer in this day and age. I am hoping that whoever reads this some day lives in a time that is ~~1999~~ than this one in a better time than this one.

I started typing this stupid thing last August and even then ~~if~~ I knew it was shit. We thought we were big bad revolutionaries because we spray painted traffic cameras and published the governor's private phone number in the want ads of the paper in a fake phone sex ad. because we were striking a fucking blow for the downtrodden and face it Elliot you thought that revolutionaries got laid like in the movies. Now Ian is dead and you have to face the music that someone died for what are basically pranks.

Ian was a good friend. Him and his fucking obsession with bugs and his fucking zoology degree. A gay black guy with a zoology degree. Could anybody have been lonelier?

Traffic Stalled by Tragic End to High Speed Chase

Traffic was tied up on the beltway for hours during yesterday's rush hour as the result of the fatal end to a police high speed chase. Police say Ian Menasco, 24, fled the scene after a scan at a routine traffic stop showed that his nerochip had been illegally altered. Police are not sure how he altered the programming on his nerochip.

Police spokesman Josaiah Fernstaedt said that this highlights the need for better monitoring. "Nerochips protect American citizens by making it clear who is here legally and who is not. When people tamper with or remove their nerochip, they are making it harder for us to identify people from outside the country who mean us harm."

Menasco was on probation for distribution of subversive materials. He worked for Conniker Systems as an environmental analyst. Conniker Systems, who has contracts with the state to monitor water pollution levels, did not respond to request for comments.

It had been, counting back, eighteen days since anyone had heard from Gil. We were all pretty sure he'd been sent to the Exterminal, which meant it was probably only a matter of time before they tortured him and broke him and we were all disappeared.

Walking down the street, my shoulders hiked up around my ears, waiting for the van to pull up behind me and someone leap out and throw a bag over my head. I dreamed at night of waterboarding. In the shower, once, I soaked my washcloth and put it over my face and breathed in-

I would break, I knew, in a heartbeat. So when the knock came on my door my first thought was, Here they are. But it wasn't the cops or the BoM. It was Laurel.

My first thought was that she'd heard from Gil, but from the look on her face, if she had, it was bad. I was living in a studio apartment, one of those ones that aren't quite a basement apartment because they have windows high up on the wall. All day while I was writing code I could see feet walking past my window on the sidewalk. I was a fucking connoisseur of shoes.

Laurel was wearing boots because of the snow. She had on an old down coat and her hair needed washing and she still made me feel so much that it was like I was sick with her. Like she was an illness I had caught. Which was stupid because she was Gil's and Gil was my best friend and yada yada yada water under the bridge, been there done that. I know she knew. Everyone else always pretended not to know I was hopeless about her. At least to my face.

The first words out of her mouth were, "Elliot, I'm sorry, I didn't know where else to go."

I scooped dirty clothes off the only armchair and dumped them on the bed (actually a fold-out couch but I never closed it, because no one ever came to my place.) I was sure the place smelled funky. It always did when I first came in, but I was so used to it that I immediately stopped noticing.

"I'm pregnant," she said.

"Gil?" I said, although it wasn't a question.

It was getting so hard to find any kind of birth control. And what they sold on the black market was so crappy.

"Did Gil know?" I asked. I didn't even realize I was talking about him in the past tense. We were careful to always say things like, 'when we get in touch with Gil...'

She shook her head.

Laurel was working in a pizza place. Once her employer found out she was pregnant, he would fire her. Pregnant and without a job, her citizenship points would drop and she wouldn't qualify for hospitalization.

"I'll marry you," I said.

Her look was full of pity. "Elliot," she said, and touched my hand to comfort me. To comfort me.

"Elliot, that's so sweet. No. I couldn't. I couldn't do that to you."

I started to say that she could, but forced myself to keep my mouth shut.

"There's this woman," Laurel said. Hesitant. "She's a physician's assistant. And she...helps...women like me."

I tried for a moment to think of what she meant. A place in the country? Have the baby in secret? Then I realized. No. I didn't believe in abortion. I had discarded most of my Christian upbringing, but not that.

"Could you...would you go with me?" Laurel asked. I almost said yes. I would do almost anything for Laurel.

I said no.

I told myself it was a matter of morality.

Did I think that if I didn't go with her she'd have to marry me? Was I punishing her for loving Gil? Gil was at the center of everything. Always. We all orbited Gil.

I don't know. God help me, I don't know.

Gil, I'm sorry. I didn't take care of her. I took her to the ER, but she was in septic shock. She had almost no blood pressure when we got there.

They took her to the back to try to save her. That was the last time I saw her.

Interviewer: Good. Whoops—don't spill!

Now: As persuasive as my friend was this morning, I think you might be able to remember a few more details if you sit quietly and think about things.

I have a magazine—see? Nice, ordinary magazine

I'm going to sit here and find out whether hemlines are rising or dropping this spring, while you think about things. Just pipe up if you think of something you might have forgotten to share this morning.

Subject: Please. Please. Listen to me. Let me go home. I'll drink the water. I'll drink three gallons a day, whatever.

Please: I'm not important. I didn't start a revolution or anything. I just did some research. I was stupid. I don't care that much. I don't want to be a martyr. Just let me go, please.

Interviewer: You want to go home?

Subject: Please.

Interviewer: Show of good faith. Here's—a nice pitcher of water. Toss that back for me.

Subject: That's like, a gallon of water!

Interviewer: Technically a little more than that, but close enough for jazz.

I like you, Jon. You're the sort of nerdy kid who desperately wanted to date me in high school. Kind of charming. But,

I need to know that you understand what's at stake here. You can be smart, you can do your science, but now you're going to color inside the lines.

Subject: Fine. Fine. Here.

<drinks>

Subject: Then I can go home?

Interviewer: Then you can go home.

Subject: Okay. Okay.

5:39pm

Subject: Um, could I please use the facilities?

Interviewer: Hmm?

Subject: I have to... I need to urinate.

Interviewer: Oh. Go ahead.

Subject: Um. Could you uncuff me from this chair?

Interviewer: Oh! You want to use the bathroom? No, no, I'm afraid not. But go ahead. I don't mind.

Subject: But I—I can't—

Interviewer: Really? It's okay, Jon.

5:42pm

Interviewer: Still holding it? Wow. Here. Have some more water.

Domestic Terrorist Pre-Sentencing Profile: Thibadeux, Sara: Summary

Status: Currently held in solitary confinement pending final sentence.

Crime(s): On 2/7/0000, two teachers and an administrator from Fishers of Men public creche in Dayton, OH were killed and a third teacher was seriously injured in a freeway 3-40 accident when two tires blew out (front right and rear left).

Detainee was apprehended by police at approximately 3:35pm that afternoon.

Detainee was transferred to federal custody on 2/8/0000 and quickly confessed to filling two tires (front right and rear left) of the driver's SUV with WD-40 earlier that morning.

Calm and resolute during questioning, showing little remorse. General manner described by first responders as "almost military." Possible links to covert training?

Network(s): No evidence of accomplices. No evidence of participation in or direct communication with existing dissident groups. Detainee distributed information related to the crime on a P2P network the week prior, including summaries of solo terrorist tactics, and advised others that together they could "shut the system down."

Supporting materials: Recent Photograph of Detainee

1 Father was a Marine, killed in Kazakhstan by a 12 year old female suicide bomber when subject was seven years of age. Closely, Detainee mentioned the suicide bomber several times during interviews, usually as "a fighter" rather than "a quitter."

2 Mother was transferred to care facility after CPI and Parenting Score dropped below acceptable levels. Detainee was transferred to local creche. Three months later, during a home visit, Detainee discovered mother consuming drain cleanser. Although mother subsequently died, emergency responders commented on Detainee's courage and quick thinking.

Jan 2, 0000

After Dad got hurt there was only Mom making money so when they laid her off we couldn't stay in our apartment any more. Grandpa said we could stay in the trailer on his farm on the condition that I keep a diary at least once every three days. It seems crazy. I don't really have anything to write.

Today what happened was Nick came over and we watched some shows and then we watched Celebrity Hook-Up and at the part at the end where you get to vote on who hooks up we always vote for Baleska (she is totally the hottest chick on the show) to hook up with the grossest guy but there are too many girls watching the show and it never works. But its fun to try.

Plus I did some packing for the move.

OKAY THAT's about it.

The re-posting of a teenager's blog vividly demonstrates the dangers of going off Parepin.

I asked MOM IF SHE WAS GOING TO DIVE dad. She said no, that even if she wasn't in love she was still loyal. She said dad used to be a lot like me. Then she started to cry and made me go help grandpa change the oil in his car.

I couldn't do it right and I got fucking oil all over my jeans and we didn't afford to buy new ones. "In order to operate a mechanical device," grandpa said, "you have to be smarter than it is. Dipstick."

"Shut. The fuck. Up."

"What did you just say?"

"Shut the fuck up! Jesus Christ, I can't do anything right! I know we're supposed to be grateful you let us stay. Only you get to live in a nice trailer, but I swear to god if you don't get off my back I am going to, going to—"

"Going to what?" Grandpa said. And what was weird was, he was grinning from ear to ear.

Without thinking I wiped my hands on my shirt, leaving oil stains on it, too. "Fuck!"

Grandpa laughed.

"Shut up!" I yelled. I leaned it back against the car. "Jesus I nearly HIT you, all right? Just ... I'm mad all the time now, and when I'm not mad I'm ... I don't know. Something. I used to watch the TV all the time and now I HATE it. Why am I so pissed off? I never used to be like this at home. What the fuck is wrong with me?"

"Nothing," Grandpa said. Still with that grin. "Nothing wrong with you that a little well water couldn't fix."

"What the hell does that mean?"

"It means I am an asshole, and I'm glad you noticed." Finally. I started to ask another question but he waved me off. "Go get washed up, Jerry. Your momma sees those clothes, she's gonna bust out crying."

Something about the way he said it made it sound like that would make him pretty happy, too.

Fucking weird.

Hannah was out behind grandpa's house screwing around by the burn barrel where all the trash is and she stepped on a nail and it went right through her left shoe. She didn't tell mom because she was afraid mom would go ballistic because we can't afford to get shoes right now.

They keep telling us America is the best country in the world. How can we be living in the best country in the world if we can't even afford a cheap pair of shoes?

I've been helping grandpa fix up the greenhouse. Everything I do is wrong and grandpa criticizes me all the time. He's an asshole. Grandpa doesn't even believe in God.

Sometimes I think about killing him. I think about taking a shovel and bashing his head in and the brains spattering everywhere on the greenhouse glass and the floor. Everything is like that. I think about Dina and I feel it so much I feel as if I don't do something I'm going to die. I get mad at grandpa and I feel like one of those school shooting kids. When I get happy or when something is funny, it's like I'm going to explode. Last night Hannah and mom and me were playing Balderdash where you make up definitions to words and I started making up funny definitions and we were laughing so hard that mom was going to pee her pants.

Today while ~~WE WERE WORKING~~ in the greenhouse Grandpa started talking about what it was like to be a campaign worker. That's what he was a long time ago. He tried to explain to me what an election was because my memory is sort of hazy. But he explained it and I said, "So it's sort of Celebrity Hook-Up, only the winner gets to run the country."

He didn't say anything. Just looked at me.

And then I said, "YOU GOT TO VOTE who is going to be President, but I only get to vote on who Rebekah is going to date this week?"

Another said, "That's fucked up."

And he was looking at me, and the longer I thought about it, the more fucked up it seemed. Like, how many life threatening terrible joke version of his. Ha ha! This is what "voting" means for you, Jerry Snow, ha ha!

And I said, "THAT'S REAL LIBERTY!"

That was the first time I ever remember seeing Grandpa smile.

We're back in Bedford for awhile.

Just not enough.

Last night when it was Hannah's turn to say grace, she started doing weird things with her mouth. She got stuck and her mouth froze. Then she made the sign for choking, where you hold your hand to your throat except she hadn't swallowed anything.

Mom said we had to go to the emergency room. I got the car keys from grandpa and then I carried Hannah out to the car. She was freaking out, even if she couldn't talk to see her looking at me. Mom got in the back seat with her and I drove us to Bedford to the emergency room.

They did an exam and when they took her shoes off her feet was all red and puffy. Mom started crying. This is Hannah has tetanus. They asked us if we have insurance and when mom said we didn't they asked us for an admittance deposit so I called grandpa and he said he had the $100. If he hadn't I would have robbed the fucking gas station I swear to god.

I drove back to the farm and drove us back to the hospital. When we got there Hannah was lying on the emergency room bed except she was arched up like she was doing a sit-up and her face was all scrunched up, her mouth was open like she was screaming without sound, the only thing touching the bed was her head and her heels. She was looking at me. She was crying. I couldn't do anything.

The nurse said we wouldn't be back there and they hustled us out. I felt sick and I wanted to punch something but I didn't want to upset mom so I walked down the hallway to the drinking fountain and took a big long drink of water. Grandpa came up and hugged me and that really freaked me out because the old bastard never even liked me. Then I knew that something terrible was going to happen.

On the TV this teacher said she saw the Hand of God.

Hannah is the same. ~~WE WISH SHE IS SO GOOD.~~ They won't let us see her. Mom says she is in God's hands. I want to puke.

Just not enough.

Is this my fault? For the things I thought and the things I did? God, don't take Hannah because of me.

I feel guilty because while we've been here we've had fast food and it tasted great. Even the water here tastes normal after well water. The hospital has a computer that you can use and wireless. Wireless is nice after having to put up with dial-up out in the country. I shouldn't be thinking about wireless and dial-up while Hannah is so sick.

DINA CAME TO HOSPITAL. It was nice of her to visit but she was really uncomfortable, I could tell. I kind of felt sorry for her, but I have to keep focused on Hannah.

It's hard to think about Hannah, really. Or about anything.

Sometimes I just stand there at the wall and I realize I haven't been really thinking about anything and I feel guilty. Then I try to pray a little and be honest about myself and I feel this calmness which I THINK is God's forgiveness. What my mom calls grace.

I realize that this time in the country has been a test of faith and that grace is a teacher. I know it sounds sappy, but I've got Amazing Grace stuck in my head.

Twas grace that taught my heart to fear
And grace my fears relieved
How precious did that grace appear
The hour I first believed.

Since we've been at the hospital, I guess I've learned what's important because I feel different. God's grace. God's calm. I'm asking God to take away my anger.

Rebekah hooked up with Rory on CHU this week. I saw that one coming. I think it could work out, too. I mean, I guess the show will keep going and changing but I think Rebekah and Rory would be good together. I used to want her to hook up with someone gross because that was funny, but now I'm more REASONABLE. I want her to have a good life. Family is fundamental. They say that at school all the time: family is fundamental.

I feel like Hannah has been going home each night but mom and I have been staying at the hospital. Grandpa got dad loaded in his old Highlander and brought him out from the farm to the hospital so dad was here with mom and me when Hannah passed.

Hannah is with God now and is no longer suffering.

I passed the GED. It was a lot harder than I thought it would be. It's hard to remember stuff I studied at ~~GRANDPA'S~~. like that stuff happened to someone else. I read some of what I wrote and I can't even remember what it felt like to feel that way. It's a different person. I'm glad I'm not so pissed all the time now, but I kind of miss that I felt smarter or something. I guess Hannah's death has really taken it out of me.

Mom got a job at a dry cleaner so we're staying in Bedford. Grandpa asked me if I wanted to stay with him. I said no. Things are a lot easier here in Bedford than they were in the country. Grandpa called me a zombie. He wanted to tell his grade about how the American people are all sheep and he thought I wasn't a sheep but he was wrong.

After awhile I just tuned him out.

Grandpa picked us up today. After we got dad's wheelchair in the back and all our clothes the Highlander was so packed you couldn't see out the back window.

Just not enough.

Grandpa lives in the country. The nearest town is Dorset, which has three roads and a gas station where you can buy beef jerky and a boarded up beauty salon and a bar.

Mom's going to home school us because there isn't a church school out here and the public SCHOOL DOESN'T HAVE service. So it's going to be Hannah and me doing worksheets at the kitchen table, I guess.

Hannah is a trooper. I caught her crying about leaving all her middle school girlfriends but she made me promise not to say anything to Mom and Dad. I guess I'll probably miss my friends too.

This is an old picture of the trailer we are living in now. That's my grandpa's house behind it.

There are two bedrooms. Mom and dad are in one and Hannah is in one because she says she NEEDS HER PRIVACY to sleep on the couch. I figure it will all be okay. Something will come through. Like mom says, it always does. It's just until she can find another job and Shop-More sucked because of her crazy supervisor. Mom says grace is the teacher. Mom is still going strong.

"I wish I was dead. I wish I had a gun."

Just not enough.

Dad was in the bedroom moaning about how his back hurt and his leg hurt. He meant the one that's partly gone, he can feel like it's still there and it hurts.

Mom was crying dad said he couldn't stand it anymore. He said if only he had something to dull the pain.

"I wish I was dead. I wish I had a gun, a gun, a gun, gun, gun, GOD IT HURTS...."

Hannah snuck out to join me on the couch in the living room and we watched VOX LateNight with the sound off.

Mom got tired of him bitching and moaning and then they really started screaming at each other until mom busted out of the room in her sweatpants and a sweatshirt and her hair and went out and got in the car.

I thought she was going to give up and leave us with him. I didn't know what to do. Dad kept lying on the bed moaning that he wished he was dead and he wished he had a gun. I told Hannah that in the morning, we would pack up and hitch back to Bedford. We would stay with one of her school friends. I could get a job and she could go to college.

I got it all worked out in my head, how we were going to manage. I was almost disappointed when Mom came back. She had driven to the gas station and bought a 12 pack of beer for dad. She dropped it on the bed and then she made Hannah go to bed and she slept in Hannah's room.

I'm thinking about going back to Bedford on my own. I could just hitch.

Dina broke up with me. By email. She said it wasn't fair for her to have a boyfriend she couldn't really be with.

Just not enough.

As if I wanted to come here. As if it was my fault.

When I could see her at school and stuff I wanted her, you know. Cause she's hot. But now its KILLING me and sometimes I can't fucking sleep and I keep thinking about her. I do it under the blankets thinking about how she would lean forward over her desk sometimes and if she left the top button of her blouse undone I could see down HER SHIRT and the elastic on her bra just snugged into the top of her breast. I hate her and I want to fuck her and I want to cry. When I try to watch CHI it seems really stupid and I can't pay attention to anything except how much I would like to bend rebekah over the arm of the couch and fuck her. It's such an asshole, I hate being like that. Dina's right to break up with me. I've tried praying for Jesus to take away my lust and anger but it doesn't help and he still mad at him and I want to say Fuck You, Jesus!

I can't believe I just wrote that.

Everything is all mixed up. It sucks that I sleep in the living room. It sucks that we only have one bathroom.

I am dying of boredom.

Just not enough.

I can't watch TV any more. It's so stupid and nothing ever happens. It's not real. People on TV are pretty and happy and fake. Nobody on TV gets their leg in a factory accident. Nobody ever loses their job at Shop-More.

When Rebekah shows up at our farm and fucks me on the carpet of our trailer, I will start watching TV again.

Something is happening to me.

Me and Hannah are growing up fast and are kind of on our own now. We're going to have to look out for each other. I think back to who I was before Christmas. I was a moron. I didn't know anything.

When we first got here it used to take me a couple of hours to do the worksheets. Now I can do one in fifteen minutes. It's not that I'm a jillion times smarter. I just used to spend a lot of time staring at the worksheet some fucking thing. Now that I can't stand TV there's nothing to do but these stupid worksheets so I am burning through the fuckers in a hurry. I'm going to take the GED February 4th

I go for walks outside. Part of the reason is to get away from the trailer. I feel different out here. Sometimes there's so much going on in my head I think I'm going crazy but actually a lot of the time it's a good kind of crazy.

Jesus spent forty days in the wilderness.

I'm not sure how he feels about me telling him Fuck You. Sometimes I think I'm going to hell, but sometimes I think Jesus probably knows exactly how I'm feeling and he's feel the same way and that was the point, he had to let himself become real like us.

I was walking and there's this big tree that's white. I looked up through the branches of the tree, I could see these white branches and this blue sky. Standing with my head back and the sun coming through the white branches and blue sky made my eyes water and made me feel dizzy. It was REALLY BEAUTIFUL though. I never looked at this before. I thought, I never really looked at anything before.

Look at the sky. The sky is beautiful.

I didn't stop drinking beer because we don't have the money to buy it. He hasn't had a beer in four days and last night I was getting crazy again.

Just not enough.

I could feel myself getting more and more pissed. I wanted to hit him. I wanted to punch him while he was lying on the floor and couldn't get up. Mom sat on the couch watching TV pretending not to hear him. Listening to him was making me so mad I was afraid of what I might do. I get more mad now than I ever did in my life. Sometimes I like being mad which scares me.

I snuck Grandpa's car keys and drove to the gas station. I didn't know what I was going to do. I didn't know if there was any money. I asked the guy at the counter if I could have the key to the john and when I came back he was watching TV so I stole a six pack. It wasn't my fault. I kept my head down so I hope the cashier never saw my face.

And you know what? It was easy.

When I came home mom said Jeremiah Snow where did you get that but I didn't answer and she didn't ask again. Maybe I'm going to hell, but fuck, it's better to be a thief than a murderer.

Things ~~SATIRE~~ ~~REALITY~~ ~~SHIT~~ don't mean for us, although they are. What I really mean the WORLD is shitty. Mom says when she was a kid, if someone got hurt at work like dad, they got disability. ~~Not a whole lot~~, but enough to help, not like dad's $127 a month. And they got help from doctors and stuff. Used to be you could go to public school and even in the country the bus came and picked you up.

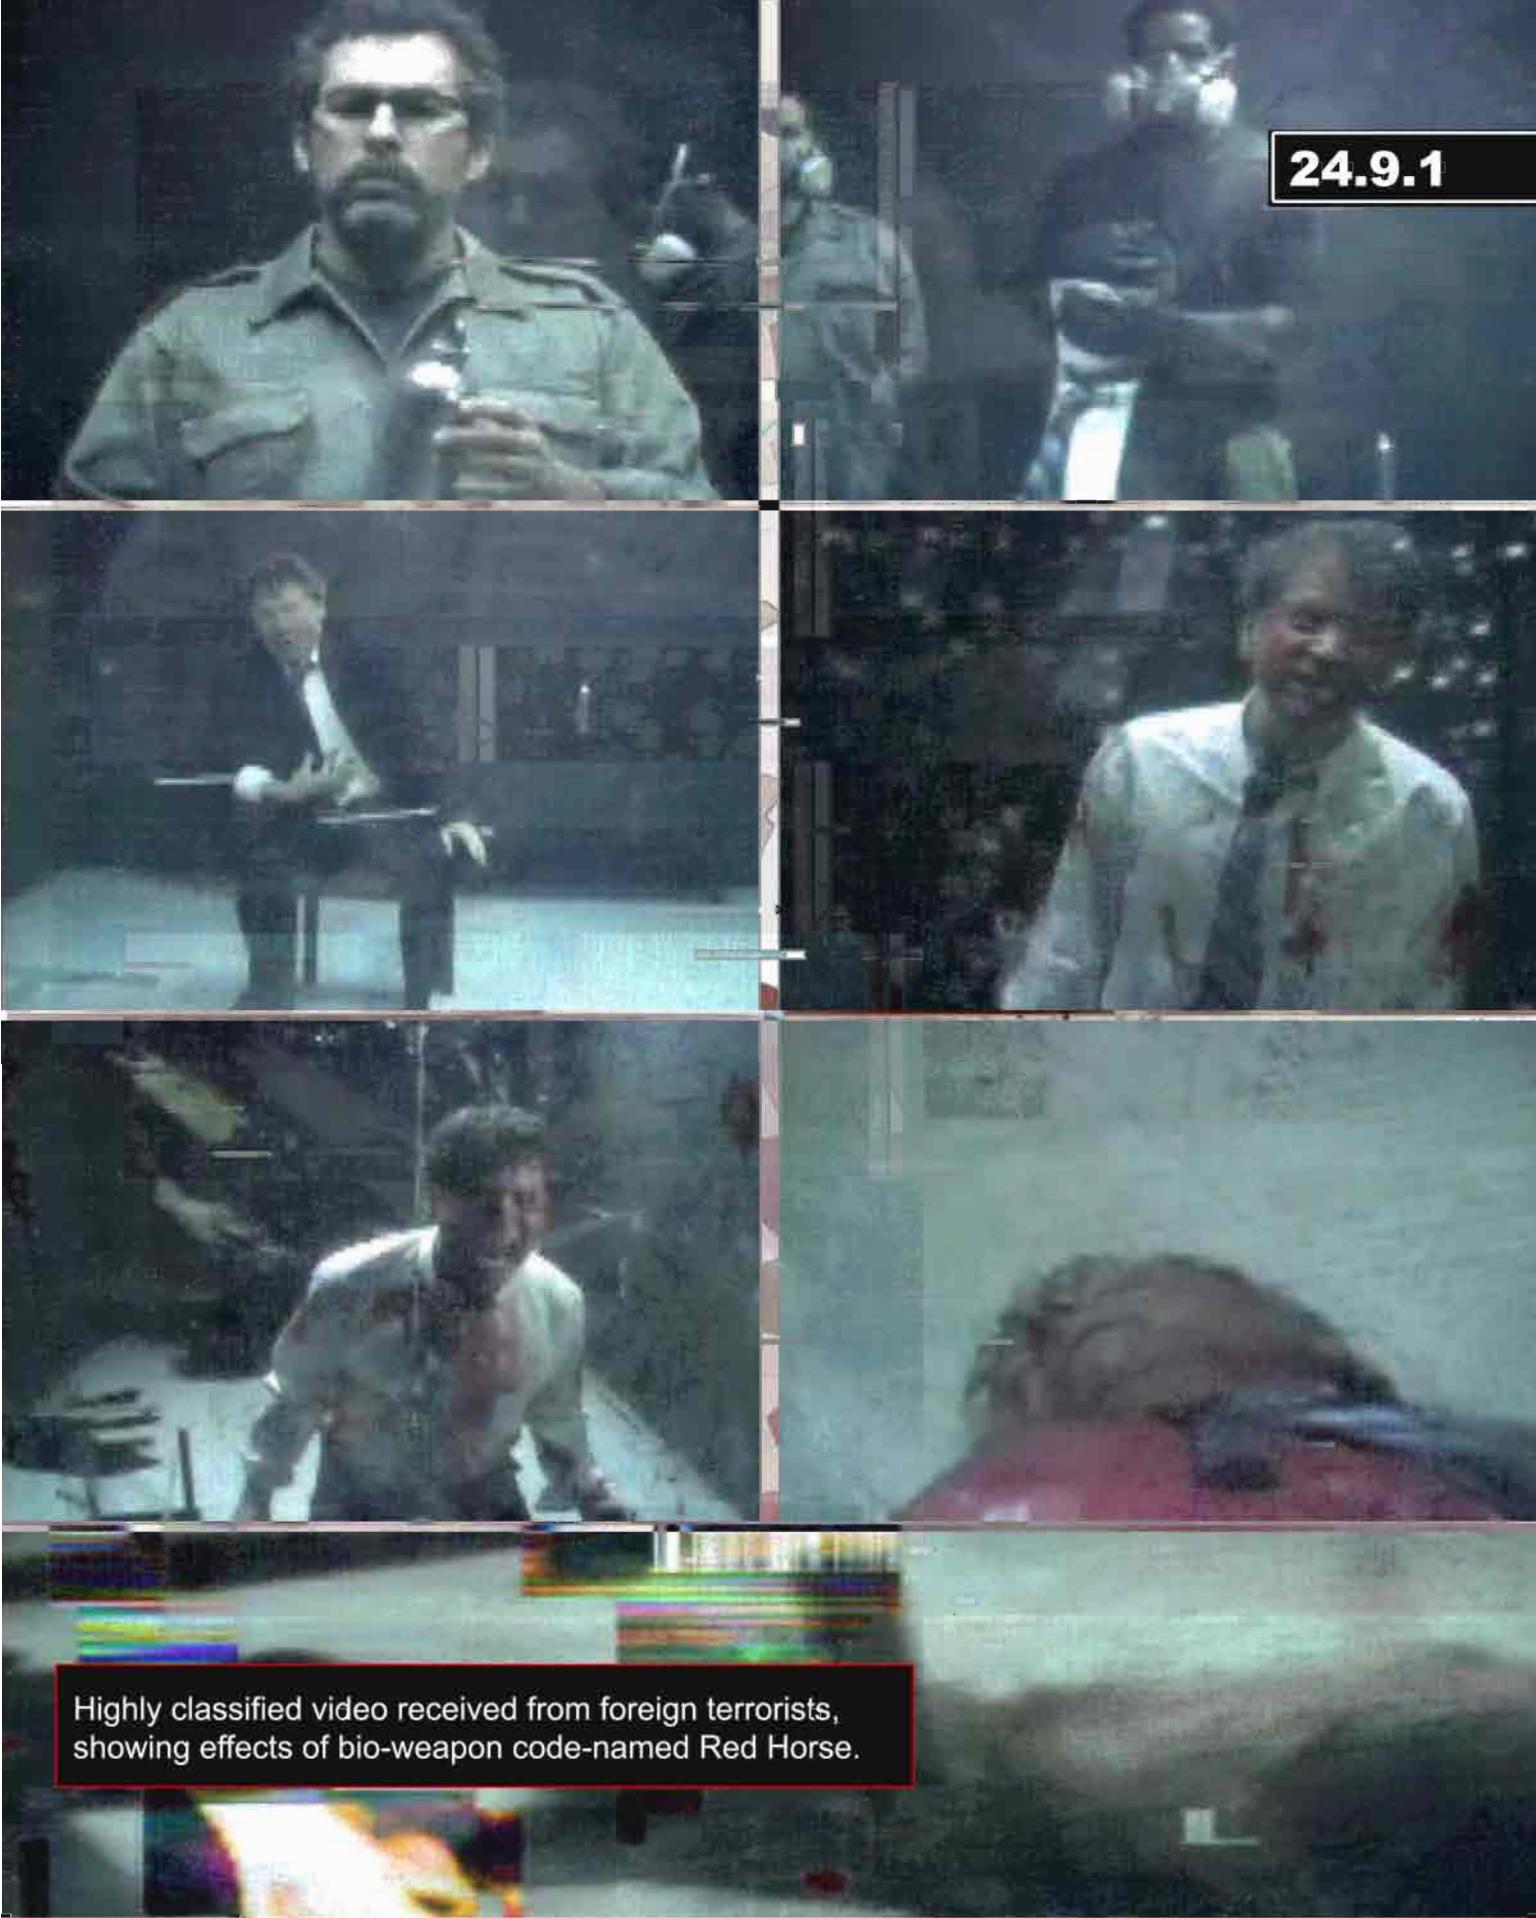

I asked mom why things are so different now and she said it was because of the war and because of ~~GLOBAL WARMING~~. She told me I had to promise not to fight in the war.

I have to register for selective service next year when I turn 18 and then I'll probably get drafted but she said I had to get out of the country and go to Belize or New Zealand. I can't even get to fucking Bedford. It was weird to hear her talk that way.

Mom's ~~politically~~ intense these days and she never used to be like that. Everything is really intense these days. I like it, but sometimes it's fucked up.

Nothing ever happened after the gas station thing, so I guess either they didn't notice or you can't see my face on the camera.

Highly classified video received from foreign terrorists, showing effects of bio-weapon code-named Red Horse.

PROPERTY OF THE UNITED STATES
BUREAU OF MORALITY

TOP SECRET*SPECIAL ACCESS*REPORT TO THE PRESIDENT ON THE DEPLOYMENT OF CHEMICAL AGENT WITHIN CONUS*Executive Summary

The Red Horse agent is extremely hardy, presenting many of the same symptoms of the Ebola virus without the attending fragility one would expect of a tropical virus in temperate or high-altitude climates. Under this administration's Directive 21-03 "Eye for an Eye," clinical trials of the replicated Red Horse strain against interred Islamic jihadist prisoners resulted in 100% mortality within 48 hours of exposure.

Interestingly, whereas Ebola patients suffer tremendous and incapacitating pain, Red Horse subjects acquire a degree of homicidal psychosis that binds the subject to his own pain and impending mortality.

This video, of captured ~~SOA~~ Diplomat Jed Mather, shows the effects of the virus.

Upon Inhalation, Red Horse patients begin to bleed out. Massive hemorrhaging follows with subjects bleeding from lachrymal ducts, ears (via cerebral spinal fluid), anus and urethra. In 65% of ~~those subjects tested~~ ~~survived~~ external stressors exacerbated the hemorrhage resulting in full mortality within 45 minutes. Unlike Ebola, full hemorrhagic fever did not present, nor did patients live long enough to manifest symptoms of necrotic organ tissue. In all cases, cause of death was determined to be massive hypovolemic shock.

Development

Approximately two years ago, a weaponized biological agent code-named Red Horse was discovered within a laboratory facility inside the Caspian port-sector of Cheleken, Turkmenistan. The facility poses as an environmental testing facility but is known to be a hub for jihadist CBRN operations.

Assets in-theatre tracked delivery of Red Horse by air into Dushanbe, Tajikistan. Hand-off of the agent to ~~the~~ ~~entitled~~ ~~to~~ ~~jihadist~~ sympathizers was captured before vectoring a UAV asset to follow subsequent delivery by land south across the Vaksh River to a village of approximately 15 families outside of Kulyab.

The agent was then dispersed. Sat recon suggests a portable pesticide sprayer was used.

The agent proved 100% effective within the village. From Patient ID COPATENDOMaga, (73 persons) it is believed that 51 hours had elapsed.

While Tajik nationalists and ~~but~~ ~~covert~~ sponsors of the jihadist movement, Muslim sympathies negate serious antipathy. It is reasonable to believe that this Kulyab Event was a beta test of Red Horse prior to deployment against CONUS.

Following the Kulyab Event, our assets recovered the Tajik courier, Hamid Al-Mahvand, a second sample of Red Horse and plans for a Site B contingency test location, also in Tajikistan.

Subsequently we received the Jed Mather video. It is clear that Jihadist cells have sufficient quantities of this virus that they want to know that they have it.

The Tajik Red Horse trial proved that the agent is sufficiently deadly that a full TRVA was conducted. A weapons development program has proven to be a qualified success, but has demonstrated several symptoms that cannot, as of this date, be countered without diminishing the efficacy of the vaccine.

Classified briefing document on the Red Horse bio-weapon.

Conclusion

CIA threat-risk-vulnerability analysis concludes that Red Horse presents a dire threat to both the Administration and its backers. Because Red Horse is believed to be at the disposal of dispersed jihadis, operatives that may or may not be currently within CONUS, it is the recommendation of the CIA that:

- Continually, voluntary funding be diverted to increase safer, faster production of the Red Horse vaccine;
- Existing supplies of the vaccine be provided for National Command Authority, the most senior strategic positions of the Administration and key corporate and religious figures, then increasing distribution to less-senior positions as inventory permits; and,
- Restrict all knowledge of Red Horse to this distribution list's eyes only to permit deniability and mitigate panic.

Should Red Horse fall under the umbrella of public scrutiny, we should anticipate a panic with severe repercussions to both economic and foreign policies. Considering Red Horse's efficacy, a public scare uncontrollable by official Vox channels RISKS PROFOUNDLY USE IT OR LOSE IT attitude among Jihadist operatives inside CONUS.

Yeah, it's really ~~shut down~~ ~~closed~~ today. This city is locked tighter than a virgin's ass. I was in the ER and it was a zoo. They closed at 15~~16~~ for four hours last night. Someone said cops killed three people in a bar up on North LaSalle and that someone got pictures ~~in~~ their cell but I haven't seen them. That whole area of apartments where the shooter was is completely cordoned off.

Non-violent resistance is hard, but it unites people. To quote Biko, "You can blow out a candle but you can't blow out a bonfire." We are NEVER going to be a nation of frightened men. People won't rally to that. Killing doesn't work for regular people. It just scares them into asking for MORE cops, MORE "protection" MORE "safety". Like Kigeli. Urge to off these fuckers too, but in the long run it helps the Admin more than it helps us. Violence begets violence.

Opal plus you know with it. I've been on the spike for the past four years. I stole money from my grandma, go right, did it again anyway, just to cop. For the last couple months, it's been too hard so I went to Opal.

I saw the Presence yesterday. At first I knew it was the drug, just gripping me, you know? And I laughed. Then the Presence turned around and was LOOKING for me.

Then it saw me. FUCK.

I remember the way my parents looked at me after I got arrested for breaking my grandma's shit. I remember the way the Finest always looked at me, like I was a worm, just street grease. And that was NOTHING COMPARED TO what I felt coming from the Presence. It wasn't hate exactly, it was like what you feel for a mosquito right before you swat it.

I'm QuietContrary's sister. I wrote him a letter if anything happened to him to come here and make sure you know. He said you were the only ones who'd understand. My brother died yesterday. His name was VINCE AND HE WAS 21. I loved him. He was shot while sitting in someone else's car. The cops said he was caught stealing it and they've arrested the owner.

The guy that shot him said that Vince had been just sitting there staring up at the sky and crying. He shot him cause he thought Vince had a gun, but it was just a screwdriver.

I think Vince was a bit paranoid and he couldn't move. I think he used to steal cars and shit to try to make something happen. Make *anything* happen. And this time it did.

AMERICA UNITES THE WORLD

A Brief History of The Dawn of a New World Order

/revisionism

January -0000: The Dawn of a New Age

The United States affirms its bonds with a jubilant global community by setting aside the past, spearheading a global learning community, and adopting a new international calendar.

February -1: A New Ally

Transnational corporations join with world governments in a Coalition for Peace aimed at eliminating terrorism and ensuring our common future.

February -2: Hero Martyred by Islamic Terrorists

Terrorists murder Jed Mather in Algeria. Months later, the Mather Law is enacted to protect both U.S. citizens and foreign Muslims.

April -3: Terrorism Averted in Northwest

Counter-terrorism programs foil an attempted terrorist attack in the Pacific Northwest.

November -4: Disgrace Leads to Renewal

A shamed President is impeached after conspiring with America's enemies. In a brilliantly decisive move, the Speaker of the House calls an emergency referendum by the American people, authorizing a Congressional panel to choose the best candidate for these troubled times.

July-October -7: India-Pakistan War

Global civil hatred erupts during the India-Pakistan War, despite American attempts to promote peace.

May-September -9: A Valiant Effort in Africa

Despite efforts to promote the peace process, Chad, Kenya, South Africa, the Sudan, and several other African nations devolve into a self-destructive spiral.

September -13: Emergency Measures Act

Addressing the weaknesses in American security that allowed events like 9/11 and the dirty bombs of Los Angeles, America is a safer, stronger nation.

August -13: Islamic Extremists Unite against American Values

The Muslim countries declare their loyalty to terrorism by forming a united front. Filled with hatred towards democracy and freedom, they declare Jihad against the U.S.

March -13: Decisive Action Against Evil

The U.S. responds decisively to Iran and North Korea. The Axis of Evil is crippled, preventing further major terrorist attacks. Since then, no major terrorist attack has succeeded on American soil.

February -13: Terrorists Try To Destroy Hollywood—and Fail

The Axis of Evil detonates dirty bombs at the 81st Academy Awards, forcing the evacuation of Los Angeles. Bloody but unbowed, the American entertainment industry relocates to Orlando, Florida, and continues to enlighten and educate the rest of the world.

January -14: President Bush Builds a Stronger Nation

President Bush leaves office having stopped the spread of terrorism and safe-guarded citizens by establishing strong decision-making hard choices.

October -15: Creation of a Plan to Protect America

Military Commission's Act facilitates "bringing to justice terrorists and other unlawful enemy combatants through trials by military commissions, and for other purposes."

August -17: Faith-Based Disaster Relief

What seemed like the disaster of Hurricane Katrina turns out to be a triumph of the American spirit and points the way to the future of social services, as church and humanitarian organizations outstrip even FEMA's relief efforts as America's citizens and churches take their rightful place in the forefront of social services.

January -17: Oil Industry Spurs Economic Recovery

A slight economic dip caused by the 9/11 attacks is quickly reversed by a strong American corporate sector led by leaders in the oil industry and their representatives in government.

March -19: America Spreads Democracy in Iraq

The U.S. leads an international coalition to overthrow the dictatorial Iraqi regime. After a quick victory, the U.S. begins the difficult but noble task of establishing democracy in Iraq.

October -21: America Frees Afghanistan

The U.S. leads a coalition against Islamic terrorism in Afghanistan, freeing the country from the harsh rule of the Taliban.

September -21: America Unites

The 9/11 attack demonstrates the need for more aggressive anti-terrorism measures at home and abroad. The U.S. government and public are united in opposing terrorism throughout the world.

March-June -23: America Defends Freedom in Eastern Europe

The U.S. prompts NATO to intervene in the genocide in Yugoslavia, protecting innocent Europeans from destruction.

August -32 to March -31: America Liberates Kuwait

The U.S. leads a massive international coalition to liberate Kuwait from Iraqi invasion.

November -33: Capitalism Triumphs

The "Soviet Empire" of Communist Russia is finally brought to its knees by the inadequacies of its economic policies and the thirst of its people to be free.

November -36: We Go Our Own Way

Thanks to U.S. support and intervention, Nicaragua establishes a lasting and stable democracy.

ANOTHER VERSION OF THE PAST

Or, how a nation founded on "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" devolved into a fundamentalist police state locked into a holy war with half the world.

February -4 0000: Is this the Beginning of the End?

The Administration suppresses relevant discussion of the Presence and what it might mean for humanity while bowing to corporate pressure to whitewash international tensions.

July -1: A New Con

A consortium of evangelical power-brokers, Administration officials, and multinational corporations unites to make the world safe for big business.

February -2: Diplomat Sacrificed to Islamic Terrorists

Jed Mather becomes the new public face for American martyrs abroad, although public reports omit Mather's moderate stance on foreign policy. Months later, the Mather Law strips American Muslims of most of their remaining rights.

April -3: Terrorism Staged in Northwest

The Administration stages a "terrorist attack" in Seattle to bolster public support for adding Parepin to the water supply.

November -4: Deceit Leads to Disaster

After a rigged trial convicts the first female President of treason, the Speaker of the House pushes through emergency legislation to overhaul how the next President will be chosen. A Congressional panel, comprising prominent New Evangelicals and corporate patsies, "saves" America by selecting the new President, extending his term and ending free elections in the foreseeable future.

July-October -7: India-Pakistan Tragedy

The ongoing conflict between India and Pakistan escalates, due in part to CIA meddling; the conflict ends with mutual nuclear destruction.

May-September -9: Africa Left for Dead

Political unrest and severe climate changes precipitate famine and warlordism in central Sub-Saharan African. The African Union issues a call for international assistance, but U.S. troops simply protect corporate interests. The state apparatus in much of Africa fails, leaving most of the continent in chaos.

September -13: American Democracy Ends

Congress introduces new legislation limiting free speech and making military personnel essentially U.S. Government property. Protestors are jailed or even executed for treason.

August -13: Islamic Extremists Unite against American Aggression

Infuriated by continuing American aggression in the Middle East and elsewhere, Muslim countries and terrorist groups unite and declare Jihad against the U.S.

March -13: Unjustified Annihilation of Civilians

Without clear evidence of who engineered the 2/22 attacks, the U.S. retaliates against North Korea and Iran with nuclear force, killing hundreds of thousands of civilians. Millions of refugees flee, causing an international crisis.

February -13: Government Fails the American People

A coordinated terrorist attack on LA leaves tens of thousands dead or sick and hundreds of thousands homeless; federal support is both late and insufficient.

January -14: Congress? We Don't Need Congress

President Bush leaves office having issued over 150 signing statements, presidential interpretations of laws that in themselves have the force of law but which do not see scrutiny by Congress.

October -15: Death of Habeus Corpus

Military Commission's Act suspends habeus corpus, which means that people can be imprisoned without charges or trial if the government claims they are a threat. Those prisoners have no opportunity for a lawyer or a court hearing.

August -17: Why Bother with New Orleans?

The number of hurricanes multiplies at a dizzying rate as global warming takes hold. Despite ample warning, the federal government does almost nothing to prepare for Hurricane Katrina; post-storm, federal support is both late and insufficient.

January -17: Times Are Hard All Over—Unless You're An Oil Company

Faced with irrefutable evidence on global warming, a US Administration staffed by veterans of the oil industry steadfastly refuses to sign the Kyoto accords. Meanwhile, Exxon becomes the first company to break the 10 billion dollar mark in quarterly earnings. Maybe it was a coincidence.

March -19: America Spreads Anarchy in Iraq

Despite a clear money chain leading from the 9/11 bombers to the Saudi royal family, the US appears uninterested in sending troops into our major oil-producing partners in the Middle East. Instead, the government presents flawed evidence of Iraqi WMDs and launches a lengthy land war in Iraq. With no exit strategy, insufficient troop levels, and waning international support, the result is a destabilized Iraq free-falling into civil war. The only long-term impact for the U.S. is increasing animosity in the Muslim world.

October -21: America Fails Afghanistan

U.S. conducted an abbreviated ground war in Afghanistan against the same troops we trained and equipped years earlier when we wanted them to fight the Russians.

September -21: America Unravels

The 9/11 attack terrifies and outrages the nation, opening the door for a series of deceptive foreign policy moves and the suspension of civil rights guaranteed under the Constitution. The event is vigorously politicized by all sides.

April-July -28: Why Bother with Rwanda?

The world ignores the Rwandan genocide that leaves 1 million Africans dead. Maybe they should have moved to the Balkans.

August -32 to March -31: Kuwait Is All In Your Head

Thousands of veterans suffer with Gulf War Illness, while Veterans Administration denies any connection to the action in Kuwait.

November -33: We Need A New Bad Guy

With the fall of the Berlin Wall, jubilation over the defeat of the Commies quickly gives way to a decade of panic for the military-industrial complex. Enormous military budgets are impossible to justify in a world where no opponent can hope to resist even half our military might. Luckily "terrorism" arrives in the nick of time as an opponent that will never go away, and needs expensive new weapons and "federal response" protocols to combat. Best of all, it's not many which can be spun as only the more recent which are dangerous when you can find no evidence of past ties.

November -36: We Go Our Own Way

The International Court of Justice finds that the United States violated international laws by supporting the Contras in Nicaragua. The United Nations passes a non-binding resolution that the U.S. should pay the fine imposed by the court. The United States never pays.

Things matter more when you have to work for them. This matters to me. I want it to matter to you, too, so I'm going to make you work.

The answer will always have something to do with a word somewhere on the page you're reading. In this case, I've even highlighted that word for you. In the future, I might not.

Read everything carefully. I promise it will be important—life and death important.

Last night.

It's snowing in Cleveland. When I was a girl, that used to happen a lot in early February. Now, not so much. Well, you remember.

I open a window in the office. I'm at the peak of the rush right now: my skin so hypersensitive even a silk blouse feels like sandpaper. The taste of batteries fills my mouth and the smell of snow is overpowering.

Wake up at 4:30, get to the rink by 5:15, two hours of practice before breakfast. Skates laced so tight my feet go numb. Cold leather, cold ice, stiff fingers, Madame Olga's fat sleepy eyes and cigarettes.

A cascade of memories, all dense with smells: exhaust fumes waiting at the bus stop, latex gloves stinking of bleach, the harsh chemical tang of the decon team at the Star Chamber. And before that, when we first walked in: the smell of 112 bodies two days dead.

That must have been what it smelled like after 2/22. Thousands of cars parked on the LA freeways, windows rolled up. The ultimate American coffins, I-5 like a new Arlington, glossy tombstones by Chevy and Honda and BMW.

Is that why I took the job when they offered it? Partly. I lost something that day.

I hate to lose.

A flake of snow comes in from the night sky: lands on my arm like a white wasp: stings.

Time to go.

For obvious security reasons, they don't let us take our computers home from The Office. This one time, that's going to work out well for me.

Step 1: take a new gelled hydrogen power cell and swap it out for the old one in my machine. The point here is——well, I'll get to that in time.

2 -> the stateless system is alphabetical in order

Eleven years ago.

The recruiter was a non-entity: middle-aged, average height, no particular accent. The sort of guy you couldn't pick out of a line-up if he'd backed over your dog with his SUV the week before.

"You stopped skating at age 16?"

"What? I thought this was a clerical job."

"Junior Analyst I," he said.

"Why do you care?" I frowned. "I never mentioned anything about skating on my application."

"We looked it up." He didn't look away from his computer screen.

One of my high school counselors used to tell me I should include skating on my resumes and college applications. People assume high-performance athletes are very self-motivated people and hard workers, although in my experience "neurotic people with very intense parents" is closer to the mark.

"You quit after 2/22," he said. "Why?"

"I lied. It's just something I do. I'm good at it, because I am usually careful to make my lies out of as much truth as possible."

"They changed the scoring system," I said.

"I beg your pardon?"

"In the old scoring system, you started with a perfect score and then all you could do was fail. It was like life. But there was a scandal and they brought in the Code of Points system, where you score for doing jumps and turns and so forth. Like merit badges."

"Merit badges?"

"Girl Scout merit badges."

"I see." He looked back at his computer and I had the funny feeling he was reading an entry about the time I got thrown out of the Girl Scouts. And that he knew the Code of Points system had become mandatory three years before 2/22.

"And that's why you quit?"

I looked at him. "Mostly. Plus, when you get boobs it throws off your rotations and you have to relearn everything. Most of the girls are on drugs to keep them from hitting puberty, but..."

"Really?" he said. As if for the first time I'd said something that clicked with him.

"Interesting."

—Interrupt:

Four days ago.

I am in a toilet stall in the bathroom of a nice French restaurant. I slip the top off a disposable syringe, kick off one shoe, and stick the needle through my pantyhose, into the webbing between the big toe on my left foot and the toe next to it. The stuff in the syringe is redder than my blood.

By the time I throw away the needle in the special garbage for Feminine Products my salivary glands are starting to clench.

Needles, swabs, pills, pain, abuse, sweat, tears.

Loneliness.

You always pay a price to perform.

—Resume:

I figured the recruiter knew I was lying and I was screwed because not only would I not get the job, but even if I caught all my buses perfectly I was going to be late for my shift in the Produce Section. I hated Produce, but it was still better than working the registers.

"Are we almost done, here?" I said. "I just want a chance to help my country." (And get on the government health care plan because my Mom's a drunk and lost her coverage and I wouldn't be covered in another three months anyway. But why mention that?) "This is my fifth interview in the last three days, not counting the entrance exams and the supplementary exam and two personality inventories, and to be honest I'm losing a ton of hours at SuperStockit."

"Have you ever handled a gun?"

And for once the recruiter looked away from his computer screen, right at me. That forgettable face. I can't even remember the color of his eyes.

I said, "What job is this again?"

"Junior Analyst I," he said.

Turns out there are people in the world a lot better at lying than me.

Not that this is any surprise to you.

After my third mandatory Foreign Field Rotation I got transferred home to Cleveland. Mom was having drinking problems and I needed to be nearby.

So I set up shop in the Cleveland Branch. Nothing about it looks ~~covert~~, high-tech, or lethal. The sign on the door says we are the Federal Print Document Control. We even have some people who actually work on printed matter from the Farm Bureau about things like the use of Fipronil on Fire Ant mounds.

The women (it's mostly women) who work in the printing portion of the office are in a kind of ~~strange~~ gray area. They have to have clearance, but they're not operatives. I think some of them are washouts. Lots of people here have clearance who aren't operatives. The administrative staff. Even Dwayne has to have clearance. I like Dwayne. Everyone I work with is very smart, very intense, hi-I'm-just-a-nice-guy-who-happens-to-know-seven-ways-to-kill-a-man-with-a-stick-of-chewing-gum kind of intense.

And then there's Dwayne in his dickies, fifty-something, replacing the toilet paper, offering to meet me for a beer and show me how a mature man is way more fun than those callow kids my age. He drives me nuts, but in such a normal way, I almost like it when he comes over and sits on the edge of my desk and says, "What's shaking, beautiful?" He carries around this twenty-sided die and he fiddles with it all the time. Takes it out of his pocket and spins it. Apparently he was into D&D when he was a kid. Yikes.

When I first start at The Office, Dwayne is trying to patent an invention that tells you where your TV remote is when you can't find it. He thinks he'll be a billionaire. He knows he's ~~meant~~ for bigger things than maintenance. "Listen, hotshots," he says, "you guys are dedicated to a cause and all that, but me, I'm an entrepreneur." He explains to me a lot about the entrepreneurial view of the world, how the entrepreneur sees life as a series of opportunities.

Wonder how that patent is coming.

My little sister, Tina, was down in LA with friends. I was stuck at home because I had a competition next weekend.

Mom said, You're used to things revolving around your schedule, Blanca. Maybe it's time you weren't the center of attention.

I hated her so much.

Mom and Dad were watching the Academy Awards when the bomb went off. I was doing homework. I had to train at the rink every afternoon so I only went to regular school until lunchtime and did the rest of my classes by correspondence.

Mom called Tina on the cell phone they got her just for the trip and she said she was okay, she was in a car with her friend Laila and Laila's parents and as soon as the traffic cleared they were going to drive up to San Francisco and get a plane home from there.

Tina called later, when everyone was choking and she was having trouble, too, and Mom kept saying, baby, I'm here, baby, It's going to be all right.

The guy in the hazmat suit that they interviewed on TV said that all the time they were checking cars, they kept hearing cell phones ringing. Lines of cars pulled every which way on the freeway with spray paint on the windshields saying that they were checked and how many dead were in them. Phones ringing and ringing, saying, pick up, please pick up, please. I called her, even after Mom and Dad stopped I snuck into my room and called and called.

This is what happens when you are a Junior Analyst I.

Physical Training

This was the easy part.

There were a few guys in my group who were high school athletes—a basketball player and a couple of offensive linemen from pretty good football teams. Football is a tough sport, but it's not on the same planet as figure skating.

All over the country little girls in pink dresses get up at 4 in the morning and spend many hours every day training to go as fast as they can and then throw themselves into the air and land on a surface like greased concrete. Figure skating is like NASCAR: the crashes are the only thing that matters. The difference is, the little girls don't get seat belts or helmets. We also have to smile when it's over.

Physical discipline is a habit. Enduring pain is a habit. The football players asked to be transferred out of my group.

I kicked ass at the physical training.

Skills

Turned out that I liked guns. I didn't think I would, but I did.

If you have a girlfriend who doesn't want to ruin the cut of her jacket or the outline of her purse, I highly recommend the old Glock 36 slimline. All the stopping power, no unsightly pantylines.

Tradecraft

Codes, drops, surveillance, security, informants and how to run them. Reduced to its essence, tradecraft is all about lying—with words, or computer programs, or body language, or bank statements.

Lying and catching other people's lies.

Waiting.

This was the hard part for me. It took me years to learn how to wait. Years and years.

In a funny way, I'm only just now figuring it out. And I learned from you.

Step 2: puncture the oxygen line into the power cell and cover the hole with a piece of masking tape.

My first actual kill. It was a Munich job, this 2/22 North Korean that grew up in LA. I begged to be on the case. Because of Tina, obviously. The whole reason I applied to The Office in the first place.

This Korean guy, Jun "Chopper" Park, came out of the LA street art scene, but somewhere along the line developed a hard-on for Kim Il-Sung, apparently. Takes all kinds. He'd gone on the lam after 2/22, spent time in Asia, finally came back into the US on a fake passport and was holed up in some crap motel in Oahu.

Like shooting fish in a barrel, Antolos said. Antolos was my partner on the project. He'd lost an uncle in 2/22, so it was personal for him too, but not like me. I think I scared him a little bit, with my intensity.

I spent the flight to Hawaii imagining how I would kill this guy. One of my favorites was, I would walk in on him cleaning his gun and hold my aim while he scrambled to put it back together, and just as he was about to slide the last piece into place – Bam! Bam! Bam!

When we found the hotel we got the room number. In the hallway I said, "mine" and Antolos just nodded. He understood. We have a mag card that works like a skeleton key on any hotel door in the US. Useful. I took it out.

I came into the room gun high. Park was jerking off. It was surreal and kind of pathetic. He looked at me for half a second. Not even shocked or scared, just embarrassed.

I flipped my gun to semi-automatic and blew his head off.

I felt like a cop on a TV show and I tried to think of one of those snappy "look who got the last word" one-liners. But everything I thought of sounded lame, so I bent over and threw up my breakfast instead.

Antolos stepped in behind me and stared for a minute. "Christ, Sherer. Talk about getting caught with your pants down."

I'd never seen brains scattered around like that. I let myself have one more time and then clamped down, forced myself to stand up and walk out of the room. I holstered my gun because I was shaking so hard I was afraid I'd fire it accidentally.

I got a commendation on my record.

They call it the copper.

You have to inject it every few days, which can leave ~~un~~ embarrassing traces. They told us to try shooting up ~~between~~ the webs of your toes. Most people don't look there.

When I signed up to defend my country, I don't remember this being in the brochure.

It's supposed to be a vaccine against the IA's 'red horse' bio-weapon. Apparently all the Higher Ups are on it—the Board of Directors at Cedars-Sinai and Halli-Bech, Vox Chairman, POTUS, the NEC Synod. I guess I should feel honored.

Trouble is, the vaccine is still in alpha. There are side effects.

Physically, the first hour after you shoot up your skin gets unbelievably sensitive. The glands at the back of your mouth keep squeezing off the taste of batteries, and when you spit, you spit orange. Orange tears, too. Orange snot when you have a cold.

The mental effects are a little harder to deal with.

You don't want to go out... big open spaces feel... exposed. It feels better to be close to walls. You like the lights dim.

I came back to my apartment one night after a double shift, flicked on the kitchen light, saw the cockroaches running for the baseboards. That's me, now, if I have a choice.

Sometimes I get a laugh imagining what a Board meeting at Halli-Bech must be like. A big table in some conference room with nobody exactly sitting at it: twenty chairs pushed back against the wall. Twenty old white guys in sunglasses. Nobody meeting anybody else's eyes. Silverfish in pin-striped suits.

The copper makes you paranoid, too. Or maybe that's the job. After a few months, it's hard to tell the two apart.

3 days ago.

I leave for work at different times every morning, and I take a bunch of different routes to work and back home. Basic tradecraft, never leave at the same time or go home at the same time. Don't take the same route every day. Every so often I see Dwayne's piece-of-crap yellow 4 by 4. Sometimes I park in the lot, sometimes I park on a side street.

This time I parked two blocks away. I'm walking through the parking lot, I notice a new car: Honda sedan with Maryland plates. I look in the window. Totally ordinary car interior, except the driver's seat has what looks like a satin pillow case over the cloth upholstery.

Dwayne's getting into the elevator as I get out. "An old friend of yours is in town for a visit, Toots." It's probably the first time someone has been called "Toots" in the 21st century. Dwayne's breath smells like beer and burgers with extra onions. He scowls over at my cubicle.

Antolos is there, grinning at me. Looking great. Smooth and clean and shiny as a bullet.

I freeze. Beside me, Dwayne spins his twenty-sided die on the palm of his hand, scoops it up, shrugs and scratches himself in a manly place. "Sure, he's good looking. But it ain't the tools," he says. "It's the plumber, baby."

Antolos takes me out to lunch, says he doesn't work for The Office anymore, wonders if I would be interested in a job. I shoot up in the bathroom between the entree and dessert and when I get back to the table with my heightened sense of smell I can now catch the faint whiff of battery acid on his clothes. He is definitely on the copper, too, but the smell is very faint. He must not have shot up in two or three days.

Maybe he's lying to me, trying to entrap me. Maybe he's just a nice guy.

I tell him I'm happy with my current job. I'm lonely, but the drug is ~~creeping~~ under my skin, so I flinch like a burn victim where the cuffs of my silk shirt rub against my wrists. Paranoid, I wedge myself back as far into the booth as I can get and think about what I would do to him with my fork if he started to pull a gun.

"Copper?" he says, when nobody is listening.

"Couldn't trust you if I wanted to," I say. Apologetic.

He understands. "Too bad."

The next morning I asked what I would have to do to retire. Turns out this job comes with more baggage than you'd think. Leaving aside the classified information I know, copper is only administered to people on the federal payroll. I figured I could just do without and take my chances if the Red Horse got out of the barn, but it turns out—and this is the funny part—it turns out the copper ~~removes~~ you pretty savagely. Enough that withdrawal is fatal.

So much for looking for work in the private sector.

9 → It has 7 musical notes

Two days ago.

I was in bed when the report came in from the Star Chamber. First the RCS started sniffing keywords leading out of the location. Then there was a beat cop report. We had been at FP Con Charlie for Red Horse for months; within 30 seconds of listening to the phone scans I knew what was happening.

I used the drill channel to the local cops and ordered them there at full speed, no sirens, no radio, no warning of any kind. I told them to get there, use their tasers to drop anyone leaving the building, and as soon as they could get into position, I said, they had to lock the place down. Nobody in or out.

God have mercy on my soul.

I ran to my car and floored it, rocketing through the empty streets, wondering how we were going to track down everyone who got out of the building before the cops could arrive. I wasn't sure which was worse: thinking about the people I had just condemned to death, the ones who were going to tear each other to pieces—or thinking about the guy dropping his subversive music down a storm drain as he hurried back to his dorm room, or the girl hiding her tattoo as she snuck back to her parents' house, not knowing they might be vectors for biological terrorism on a scale we could barely imagine.

Two minutes before I arrived on scene, the night operator at The Office got a weather report from Virginia in best Langley style: 100% accurate forecast of something that had already happened.

The first cops were already on the scene. One of them had tasered someone coming through a door and was looking sick about it. Padlocks were on and they were starting to string yellow tape.

The sounds coming from inside were something out of your worst dream.

I stayed in the background, watching until everything was boarded up and locked down. When I couldn't stand the screaming any more I left. Instead of going home I went back to The Office, sat down in my cubicle and watched the news crawlers for signs of an outbreak somewhere else. Hour after hour.

No outbreak came.

By noon the next day we were beginning to smile. By six that evening there was another commendation on my record.

It was a miracle.

Yesterday Morning

Dwayne was parking his 4 by 4 when I drove into the lot. I smiled and he waved back. Apparently he had forgiven me for making eyes at Antolos. I was a little flirter than usual. He liked that. I made small talk, asked him where he drove in from. He said some place in Lakewood and I asked him if it wasn't easier to come in I90 and he said yeah but this morning he had stopped to make an appointment with his mechanic and come in another way.

"Listen," I said. "When Gus Antolos was here—that guy, you remember—did he go anywhere else in the building?"

"I think he was down in the dungeon for a while," Dwayne said.

"Clean rooms, or Interrogation, or the pen?"

Dwayne shrugged.

"Did you notice anything unusual when you were dressing up?"

"Sorry." Dwayne was beginning to look puzzled, his radar blank.

"No...flowers or anything?"

Enlightenment dawned. Dwayne looked at me seriously. "Listen, baby, creeps like that, they'll break your heart. You need an older man. Somebody settled down."

I did my best to look disappointed. "Maybe you're right."

Some days Dwayne is gone by 4:45, but that night he stayed until 5:18 exactly. I watched the other cars pull out of the lot one by one, and then went down into the dungeon. Everything seemed to be in order, but then, it would.

I didn't know what I was looking for until I found it almost two hours later. In the dumpster behind the building, a pair of latex gloves that smelled like bleach.

12 -> able was I ere...

12. Yesterday Early Morning

I tried to book a 5 AM slot at my local rink yesterday but it was already taken by some hotshot Ukrainian piers coach. Finally I begged for the 4:30 – 5:00 slot, told the guy I knew where the lights were and he could leave the key under a mat outside the back entrance.

Cold ice, cold boards, old skates I hadn't put on in years. Lacing them up with a skate key, tight as tourniquets around my ankles.

Steel hissing on the ice.

The trouble with paranoia is, once you start, there's nowhere to go but down.

Here's the thing: no further outbreaks of Red Horse.

Meaning, everybody who contracted the disease stayed in the building. Everyone who got away, got out before they were breached on or bled on or will have you. Thank god.

Sometimes miracles happen.

But recreate the situation. A Jihadist (or his victim) is strung out on Red Horse. He plunges into a crowded nightclub. A fight breaks out. A few people are cut. Maybe a couple of people die. Maybe the bouncers step in. Maybe somebody calls the cops or the ambulance. There's a crowd, because there is always a crowd. And there are runners, because there are always numbers.

Nobody exposed to the virus tries to get out of there before the cops and EMT's arrive? Of course they do. Of course they do.

Only the doors are locked.

The only way the equation makes sense is if the doors were locked before I ordered them locked.

If they were locked the minute the vector went downstairs.

I still take responsibility for ordering them all to die. That happened.

But somebody else was there before me.

The thing about competitive figure skating is, there are no secrets. Not in competition. You go out into the circle of blazing light in front of a panel of judges and ten thousand people in the stands and there is no place to hide. For four minutes, it is the most exposed place on the planet.

And for that reason, in a strange way, the cleanest.

It was good to feel the ice under me again. At first I stayed close to the boards, getting my legs back. I ramped it up, skating fast, crossover turns, my elbows brushing the fiberglass. A half-turn, skating backwards now, still faster than most hockey players can skate going forwards. Madame Olga used to make money teaching hockey players how to skate. Raced them at the beginning of every camp, dumpy in her furs and chain smoking. Every year another generation of guys drop-jawed to learn that on the best day of their lives they can't skate with a fat middle-aged figure skater.

For some reason, it was very difficult to get away from the boards and skate into the middle of the ice.

If you accept that the nightclub doors were locked as soon as the vector went into the building, everything gets simple. Black, but simple.

A terrorist wants a plague to spread, doesn't he? He doesn't want it contained.

Or say he does. Say this is a warning shot across our bow. Wouldn't our terrorist try ... a government office? An army base? A school gymnasium? Doesn't it seem odd that an IA operative would target a pack of college kids full of dissident ideals?

The worst thing about paranoia is that you don't know when to stop. Because if we set up the business in the Star Chamber, what else might we set up?

Chopper Park was part of the gang that pulled off 2/22. I know that because it said so in his dossier. The dossier that gave the greenlight to go Munich on him. Written by the people who picked me to take the lead, take the shot.

Around and around the edge of the rink. Lights dim because I couldn't stand them bright. The horrible naked feeling in my shoulder blades, like someone had a scope on me.

The click and hiss and scrape of steel on ice. The sound of my breathing, getting louder. Head down. Heart pounding.

Around and around. Around and around.

What were Gus's orders? What would he have done if I had decided to take Park back to the main hall for interrogation?

Only the hiss of skate blades in the darkness. And I never could force myself to fly out into the middle of the ice, and jump.

Just circled the baseboards in the dark, leaving little orange team logos on the ice.

Around and around.

Who killed my sister? Really?

13 -> all the vowels

13.
Today, lunch time

Me just back from hazmat duty, stomach ~~wriggling~~ out from retching. People in The Office are arguing about the best place to get cole slaw.

Gwen says, Hey Dwayne, I'm getting lunch, you want something from the deli? He glances at the menu and rolls his eye and says, yeah, get me a turkey sandwich.

Step 4: Wire the Igniter to a key...

14 -> cabbage king's mood

14.
Early this evening

Dwayne left at 4:47 exactly.

Took a swing by the dungeon. No sign of Gus. Out in the parking lot, no sign of the Honda with the satin pillowcase on the driver's seat.

Used some tradecraft. Found something I wasn't supposed to see.

Can't say my hopes were dashed. Can't say I was surprised at all.

Someone tries to watch the watchers. Someone really good. Someone the watchers will never suspect.

Someone that doesn't need the drug to make him paranoid. Who has another trick for never driving the same way twice, never leaving work at the same time, never ordering the same item off the deli menu.

For the record, I never joined the service because I loved the game. Some do. They are the athletes of betrayal. They don't need patriotism or money or fame to do what they do. They lie and cheat and betray for the love of the game itself.

It's at least clean.

I was never like that. I wanted to protect my country. I wanted to keep Mom and Dad from getting divorced. I wanted to make it up to Tina that I hated her for going to LA and then she died. You can't afford to hate the people you love, even for a moment, because they can be taken from you.

What I'm saying is, I'm not like you. I'm just an amateur.

But I still like to win.

You should know that you are not the only person reading this. The first, but not the last.

15 -> past present

10 minutes ago.

Say you wired the ~ key.

When it's hit, it will burn to the igniter which will eat through the tape and ignite the gelled hydrogen inside.

If someone is reading a very very small font, their face is likely to be closer to the monitor when it blows up.

...one country at a time.

24.11.1

Anti-government "comic book" about the war in the middle east.

He was the Captain, but that didn't mean we had to like it.

100 mile round trip through hostile territory.

Land mines.
Manpads.
Scorpions.

"For a 12 year old piece of Syrian pussy?" Blip said. "Fuck."

Nobody else would say it.
But we were all thinking it.

A medic might have saved him...

But Gomez was the medic.

The first thing I learned to draw was bodies. I heard somewhere that Leonardo used to buy corpses and cut them up to see how bodies were put together. I stole an old copy of Grey's Anatomy from the school library and hid it under my bed.

I wanted to draw like other guys wanted to be on the football team. I wanted to be a bad-ass. I wanted girls to think I was cool and moody and deep. I drew pictures of girls I wanted to sleep with hoping they would notice and it actually worked sometimes.

I used to wish I was more of a creep so I could just fuck them and not worry about it afterwards but it turned out life wasn't really like that. Even Cammy, the tough girl who dyed her hair black and kept getting suspended, we were in her room in the basement, her parents overhead staring at the tv, she pushes her panties down and looked all flushed and embarrassed and I thought, "I'm the age my dad was when he got mom pregnant with me!"

It made you want to crawl flat. It made you want to tunnel into the sand and hide.

There's only one problem with using a scope.

When the sun catches it, sometimes there's a flash.

It's not much...

But a good sniper doesn't need much.

I'm not saying what happened next was right.

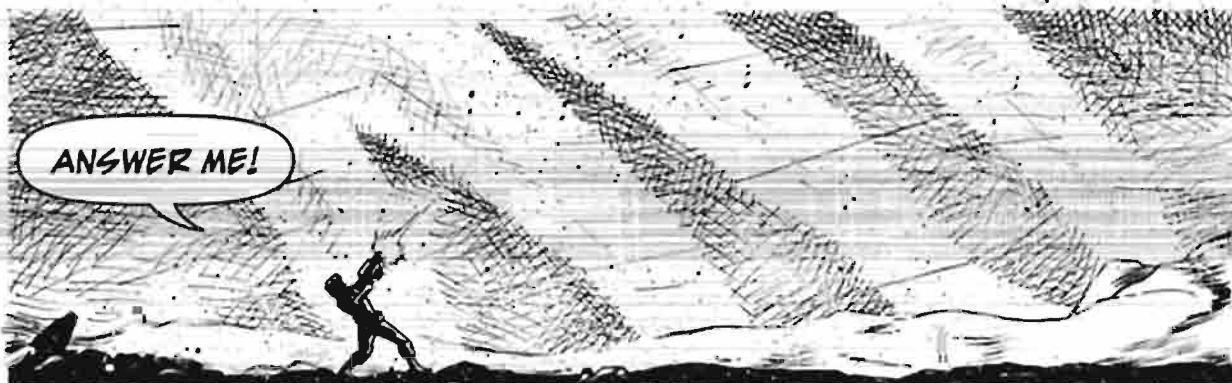

But he'd already gotten two men killed.

And now he was shouting at that thing.

As if he wanted to bring the lightning down on all of us.

KRAK

The last day before he left us my dad took us down to Corpus Christi for a treat. He lay face down on the oil-spotted sand while we screamed and jumped the surf and poked at the dead jelly fish lying on the beach. I still remember him lying there, surf babbling around his feet. It seems impossible that I didn't know what was coming.

When we were nicely sunburned and sick on soft-serve ice cream we went back to our room at the Holiday Inn and mom and dad told us the news.

He talked about how much he loved us but how the country needed him. I knew that he just didn't like living with us anymore, but I hoped Angie was little enough that she would be looked.

He came to visit three times. The last time was just a few months before Angie was killed. I was fifteen and refused to leave my room and visit with him. My mom tried to make me. She said he was about to ship out and I should be nice but I fucking hated him and everything he stood for and I wouldn't answer him even when he talked to me through the door.

Angie did, though. She gave him the special cross she got for her sixth grade graduation.

She always was a goody-goody.

I'm a street artist. I got these panels in the mail from a GI in Syria. I thought at first it was from someone who knew my art.

I was wrong.

The form letter from the army said my father had been killed by friendly fire.

I've spent the last couple of years doing street art projects against the Syrian campaign. I used to think it was to piss off my dad. Maybe it was to bring him home. I can't tell anymore.

Guys I went to school with are in the army now. Others, like me, have drifted into a different kind of army. We fight with chalk and spray paint, and it used to be a whole lot safer, but in the last few years things have gotten bad. A tagger I used to hang with got picked up last month and shipped to the EFDC on Guam.

My mom hooked up with a born again dude. He calls me every couple of weeks to tell me she's drinking a lot and maybe she would listen to me if I told her to stop. He's real earnest. He doesn't understand that sometimes people get broken and you can't fix them anymore.

The guy who killed Angie, the last thing he said before the trap door opened, he looked at the camera, right at me, and he said, "I'm so sorry."

My dad wasn't a bad guy, but he probably killed people in Syria and Iraq. Maybe a lot of them.

The last thing I ever said to him was that I hated him and never wanted to see him again.

Friendly fire.

Meanwhile, all over the world tonight, US troops are spreading democracy with tanks and bullets and planes and guns. In these last days, I wonder if the generals and the CEOs and the President in his bunker look at their TV monitors and see that fucking giant hand coming down on us all, innocent and guilty, Christians and Muslims, black and white. And I wonder if they feel like I do, that something else has just shown up, with its own locked and loaded magazine of manifest destiny, set to bring a new kind of reckoning...

The story you need to know starts in Syria, 2/3/0000

Cops almost got me last night

We were doing silhouettes down by Ft. Sam Houston, hadn't thought of that place in years and then we were on hands and knees crawling through this culvert/drain pipe under one of the roads and I realized--

- this is where I got laid the first time, Terri Rice smelling like sweat and cinnamon, me all boy boy and then afterwards her trying to pretend it hadn't hurt and me thinking fuck I didn't mean it to be like that.

Weird night. The strange and familiar sliding in and out, like a dream. I had forgotten the sound of choppers overhead, like a ceiling fan, how I used to fall asleep to them.

Anyways, guys with stickers and guys with paint and me with my chalks, a sentry and sisters, us diving for the darkness like swimming cockroaches, the adrenaline high, that's right we're fucking roaches we're the common cold, assholes, you cannot stop us all.

Afterwards the others wanted to go for a drink and Mary was looking at me That Way (like we only ever do it after the Art Ops anymore)

But somehow I didn't want to, didn't want to be with any of them. The Protectors. Mom's an accountant/teacher/librarian, dad's a magician/lawyer/preacher

They never lived in Fort Sam (or Bagg, or Bliss or pick your particular hell) never went to basic school; never saw someone pulled out of class to get the letter, go home white-faced and dry-eyed because back then we were doing our part and you never let them see you cry, even when they dropped the flag over the coffin and fired the guns because that would be giving in. that would be letting them win.

There was an email from a soldier in Syria waiting for me when I got home.

I asked the Captain once if he still believed in the Lord. In what we were doing here.

He said, "I'm trying."

That Syrian girl would have been... 11? 12?

When she was 14, my little sister Angie, was abducted, raped, and murdered by an ex-Special Forces marine commando who had been discharged after operation Sandstorm. Afterwards he turned himself in and was hanged. My mom wouldn't watch the telerast but I did. I was hoping it would make something better.

Here is one thing the government wants you to forget.

YOU HAVE A VOICE

HOW ARE YOU GOING TO USE IT?

FOR TRUTH

The artist shows what the government wiretaps and spies on its own people, people become afraid to speak the truth.

SPEAK THE TRUTH

FOR UNITY

The artist shows what everyone is thinking. The government wants people to feel isolated and alone. A stencil in a public space says, YOU ARE NOT ALONE

FOR POWER

The government wants you to think you are powerless to act.

YOU CAN ACT

This doesn't mean it's easy. This doesn't mean no one died. But governments cannot survive shame. A government can jail people, denigrate, and power, but when a million people no longer believe in that government, it will tremble. That million will be joined by another million and some of them will be judges and soldiers and cops. A house divided cannot stand.

GOVERNMENT REQUIRES THE CONSENT OF THE GOVERNED

If the American people participate in this administration, IT WILL fall.

The truck kind of climbed over the car. Smashed it like an egg—front windshield just blew out like a grenade had gone off.

And we ran. We didn't run to the accident to see if he was okay. We were just scared of getting caught.

That night it was on the news, the guy was a vice president of some local company and he had a wife and two kids and he volunteered for some local animal thing. I think it was a rescue group for abandoned Labrador retrievers. Anyway, a couple of people saw him being chased, but they didn't have footage.

I was sitting on the couch with my mom and she said, "there's some poor guy holding down a job, has to work late, he's got a wife and two kids and maybe one needs braces and probably his mom is in a nursing home and that isn't cheap, who have the time and free money to wander around at night and scare the shit out of people think its funny to give them a hard time. Wonder if they're gonna show up at his kids' school play?" And my dad says, "I'm sure they'll take a shift over at the nursing home." And it's not like they were stupid and mad AND DON'T GET IT THEY WERE just full of this really grown up weary contempt. And they were absolutely right. Absolutely right.

Talking about a revolution is really fun. Some people make it sound like killing people is really fun. It isn't.

It makes it easy for you to think that the cops and the bankers and the soldiers are all Them. They aren't. They're us, too.

POSTERS

Large format printers are bitch to get cheap or discreetly. If you Know a Guy Who Knows a Guy, try it but you're taking a chance. You can make a small design and blow it up with a projector or easel or something. Silk screening is good quality but if you don't know what you're doing, all that paint you're slopping on your floor and shoes = evidence.

STENCILS

Use only flat spray paint but don't let wet paint dry up on the stencil. If you're doing multiple colors, let each color dry before the next. If they're big enough, mount the stencils with a light mist of spray adhesive. Mmmm, sweet chemical goodness. DON'T TAKE THAT SHIT IN, DARWIN.

BONUS: I happen to live where it rains a lot.

Fact: If you use hairspray like spraypaint it will dry again in about until it rains, at which point it fades into existence, fading again when the concrete dries. Not that I've ever done it.

Parepin affects brain chemistry specifically dopamines.

Dopaminergic overactivity is linked to schizophrenia. Parepin dosage is not controlled. It's just in the water. The more water you drink, the more parepin you ingest. It seems possible that some individuals are more sensitive to Parepin, and that others are ingesting more because of their lifestyle.

It does not seem to me coincidental that this wave of sightings has occurred since Parepin was added to the water. Parepin may make some people more susceptible to visions and hypnagogic hallucinations (those very vivid dreams you have when you think you are awake.)

WHAT IS PAREPIN?

PAREPIN AMERICA'S FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE

Orlando, Fla. — This weekend, Parepin will be added to Orlando's drinking supply in what is both a symbolic and a very practical move in the battle against biological terrorism. Parepin strengthens the immune system, boosting immunity against a wide range of biological weapons.

After the devastating dirty bomb and biological attacks against Los Angeles and Anaheim, Orlando was selected for protection from biological attack. Washington, DC, New York City, Atlanta and Boston will all be adding Parepin to their water supply before the end of the month, and national rollout should be completed. (see PAREPIN, p. 12)

Parepin is the brand name for a man made drug that is also sometimes referred to by its generic name, zeridine.

Developed in a groundbreaking partnership between a major pharmaceutical company and the National Institute of Health, Parepin is a complex drug that boosts the immune system. Parepin is a revolutionary drug made possible by the advances in medical technology from the study of AIDS and other immune diseases. While antibiotics target bacteria and antiviral drugs target viruses, Parepin is not designed to combat a specific disease or set of diseases. Instead, it makes the body better able to combat all disease.

*Really?
Where's the proof??*

Parepin/zeridine is a closely guarded secret with extensive legal protections that were put into place by the Bio-Terrorism Prevention Act.

Author Calista Whitcomb Dies

Actor and environmentalist Calista Whitcomb was found in her Winter Park, Florida, condo on Saturday, May 13, from an apparently self-inflicted bullet wound to the head. Friends said she had become unhappy and paranoid in the days leading up to her death.

Whitcomb came under widespread criticism earlier this year after making public accusations that the U.S. government was "poisoning its own electorate." Despite huge success of her new movie Sing Me to Sleep, Whitcomb was reportedly having difficulty getting green lights on her projects as studio executives shied away from her.

my last successful FOIA request before they struck from the books

He said that Whitcomb routinely refused to drink the water, saying she had brought her own and that he was "a fool for drinking that pisswater filled with toxins." When he brought her water, she would refuse it, insisting that he drink it instead. When he asked her what toxins she was referring to, she said, [REDACTED]

Other interviews confirm Whitcomb's obsession with "not drinking the water." Surveillance has supplied no direct evidence of involvement with organized dissenters, but the possibility is distinct.

Her increasingly high profile makes her an unfortunate mouthpiece for resistance forces, no matter her actual level of involvement. Strongly suggest [REDACTED] for her actual level of involvement.

Parepin also affects dopamine and serotonin levels. So do anti-depressants and illegal drugs like cocaine, methamphetamine and opal. No other immune system booster, antibiotic or antiviral that I can find has any effect on neurons. Parepin is a Paraphysisal drug, isn't it?

I used to dismiss conspiracy theorists about the Administration's "real reason" for adding Parepin to our water. Now, I'm not so sure.

I was already an adult when Parepin was first introduced into the water supply. During the last two months, since I've gone off Parepin, I've experienced feeling that I hadn't even remembered. If you're in your thirties or older, you might remember it.

It's a feeling of clarity: your thoughts are clear and ordered, you feel the sharpness of both sadness and joy, and you begin to have ambitions to see more, hear more, do more. It's not a "high," although I do feel more energetic than I have for years. I sure get a lot more done every day. It's actually kind of scary, because everything seems more important. More urgent. Problems are more frightening. happiness is more vivid. I just feel more...present.

Most of all, my mind is working again. I'm starting to think about a lot of the problems our country is facing, and how we got here. The Administration would tell you I'm suffering from paranoia, I don't think I'm paranoid. I just feel awake.

Bio-Terrorism: Promise or Threat?

TERRORIST ATTACK IN ### NORTHWEST

Parepin Water Treatment Saves Millions

Seattle, WA. Instead of widespread panic and mayhem, calm relief carried the day in downtown Seattle and surrounding areas. The FBI revealed today that a coordinated bioterrorism attack failed to have the intended consequences thanks to the ongoing treatment of public water supplies with the immune booster Parepin.

"We saw a few cases of illness in folks from rural areas who were in the city yesterday, but that was all," said an FBI spokesman. Some people in rural areas use well water that has not been treated with Parepin, but authorities recommend buying Parepin-treated water or having a Parepin treatment system added to wells (available at no charge at your local municipal center).

When early versions of Parepin first went into our water supply, the brief outcry was squashed primarily by evoking the horrors of bioterrorism and presenting Parepin as a key defense.

"Would you rather suffer a few mild side effects, or put yourself and all your loved ones at risk of dying ~~at a~~ from me death?"

I know what my ~~answer was for~~ long time. I didn't care a bit about being constipated, or twitchy, or losing most of my sex drive, or even risking the occasional "serious" side effect... so long as I felt safe.

Then I met an old friend of mine. He seemed different from everyone else. Sharper. Healthier, even. He told me he'd been off Parepin for four years solid. I didn't believe him at first, but he was very convincing. He said he'd been off Parepin during the northeastern bio-attack in '19 and didn't suffer a thing.

Now that I've been off Parepin, I'm beginning to wonder if bio-terrorism isn't a threat, but a promise that big government always delivers on every day. What if Parepin isn't the antidote, but the disease?

What if Parepin is bio-terrorism?

THINK ABOUT IT AND if you're feeling plucky, try a little vacation from the public water supply. See if things don't seem a lot clearer.

do you still believe this?

Doctor—

DR. GANTRY

I am trying to save your life!

INMATE #4382BX12

You did not come here to save me.

DR. GANTRY

I did, for all the good

INMATE #4382BX12

You came so I could save you.

[At this point, there was silence for a long period.]

DR. GANTRY

I – I didn't... I

INMATE #4382BX12

I am A VESSEL, NOTHING MORE. I am a bell struck by God and you can hear the truth ringing from me. You came for the same reason they all did, all the poor suffering bastards outside this prison.

DR. GANTRY

I am nothing like—

INMATE #4382BX12

I am trying to save your life.

You are exactly like them, and like me, and like the rest of God's poor creatures. We suffer and we die and that is all.

Isn't that reason enough to be kind to one another? In the last few hours before dark?

[At this point, the inmate stopped speaking his fingers touching his nose and he added he wanted Dr. Gantry to do the same.]

DR. GANTRY

What...

What should I do?

INMATE #4382BX12

Go home. Tell Francesca you love her. Wait for the end.

NOTES:

This inmate was transferred from a local emergency room for admitted use of an illegal drug and in accordance with the Emergency Measures Act proscription against individuals publicly orating about "the Presence."

Inmate is a young woman in moderately good health, with a freely admitted history of recreational drug use. She appears lucid and coherent, maintains good eye contact, although she is disposed to ramble about identifying with the planet and its "plight." Photosensitivity and dilation of the eyes may be a result of recent Opal use. Inmate is wakeful but does not exhibit signs of mental or physical fatigue. She reports heightened physical perception that appears to extend beyond the normal effects of Opal use, although this may be more psychological than physical.

Consistent with other "Presence" inmates, inmate is complacent about her imprisonment. She is non-aggressive but insists on the external reality of her delusions.

Inmate has not related an obvious stressor that might have precipitated this delusional state, and does not display overt signs of anxiety, depression, or mania. She may have entered a dissociative state to psychically escape recent trauma, distancing herself from emotional strain by entering a fantasy world reinforced by media reports and her memories of "highs" from drug use.

In light of recent events, I believe the inmate requires confinement, heavy sedation, and strict supervision by detached, experienced personnel.

RECORD OF CONVERSATION, 2/8/0000

TRANSCRIBED 2/10/0000

DR. GANTRY Good Morning. How do you feel?

INMATE #6455DA04 Nervous.

DR. GANTRY

Well, that's understandable. But I'm going to do what I can to help you. Will you promise to answer me honestly?

INMATE #6455DA04

Yeah. I do.

ades - F

DR. GANTRY Good. THANK YOU. We'll start with the night you started to feel what you call a "presence."

INMATE #6455DA04

Um, I was at this party they had this new thing. You got a little piece of paper and you swabbed your hand with some kind of solvent and then touched it to a piece of paper dusted with the black, you know? So it would come in through your hands. So I tried it, I was sitting in the bathroom just waiting for the push. The bathroom was all white but the guy hadn't cleaned it in a while, so I just sat looking at mildew until the push came. IT FELT SO GOOD just sat there a moment.

DR. GANTRY

Excuse me. Why the bathroom?

INMATE #6455DA04

You get more of a push if you drink a lot of water first. Even more if there are a lot of people doing it with you. Makes it a bit weird, sometimes. Like, two people drinking as much water as they can and stoned in some lousy apartment with one bathroom or something.

DR. GANTRY

Hm. I can see how that might be awkward. Let's get back to the Presence.

INMATE #6455DA04

You seem very interested in the Presence. Aren't you supposed to be telling me there is no such thing?

DR. GANTRY

I have to respect your experience. Later, we may talk together about what it means. Right now, I just want to hear your story. Did you see anything? A vision, or a hallucination?

INMATE #6455DA04

BLACK ISN'T LIKE ANYTHING ELSE things, you know? I did mesc for awhile and I had this one time where we were walking down the street and I could see in every house. I could see what people were doing. Black isn't like that.

DR. GANTRY

Very interesting. I didn't know that. So what happened next?

INMATE #6455DA04

I felt like there was someone in the bathroom with me. I turned around but one was there. I could still feel a presence, so strong that I checked inside the shower. My hands and feet started to feel... full.

Full?

Like everything pulsing. And then my spine started to feel hot. Like hot wax filling my spine from the inside. And then the fullness started to move in, up my arms and legs, and the heat started to move out and when they met... Oh. It was so good, so good, like the best lover I ever had moving inside me and my skin tingled everywhere. It was good but so scary, someone knocked on the door and I jumped out of my skin. I felt like something else had filled up my skin and I was just riding around on it, watching. I walked out of the bathroom but it's not like I was at the party. It's like I was watching the party. Moving around and saying hi to people but it wasn't really me doing it. Something else had run into my skin and "me" was just pressed up into a little corner of my skull. The something else wasn't just inside my skin, it was outside, too. Everywhere. I felt like I was nervous at the same time. Electric. I don't know how to explain it.

DR. GANTRY

That's okay. Just try to describe it as well as you can.

INMATE #6455DA04

Well, all that energy and heat, it's suddenly there in the middle of my body. And it expands into my chest, into my head, and then I'm turning inside out and I can feel the whole planet. A little part of my brain can see that I'm at this point sitting on the beach, but that's so tiny. A speck. The planet is huge and it's complicated and I can feel the ocean currents, diving down from the Arctic and the Antarctic and moving slowly and then warming up and coming to the surface. I can feel a storm swirling across the water. I can feel mountains shifting and air moving and snow falling. [stuttering]

DR. GANTRY

Yes?

INMATE #6455DA04

I can't describe all the stuff I could feel. I can still feel it, a little. I'm in this thing. It's huge and I'm huge.

DR. GANTRY

What is the "thing" you're in?

INMATE #6455DA04

I start feeling itchy. It's all the roads and buildings and stuff. They're making me itch. Then I feel pinpricks of pain. All these little poisons, dumping in my veins. Wells being sucked dry. They hurt. The air itself hurts that makes me cough. I hate it. It's like I'm being poisoned.

ades - Fly

DR. GANTRY

Maybe the "poison" was the drugs that you've—

INMATE #6455DA04

Then that goddamn notices me. He knows I'm the one that's making the poisons. I'm the one that's hurting everything. And it's going to clean me off the planet so it stops hurting. But that's all right, I understand.

DR. GANTRY

That's quite a hallucination.

INMATE #6455DA04

It wasn't a hallucination.

DR. GANTRY

Okay.

Did it...

INMATE #6455DA04

Did it? What?

DR. GANTRY

<unintelligible>

INMATE #6455DA04

I'm sorry, I couldn't hear you.

DR. GANTRY

<unintelligible>

INMATE #6455DA04

God? No fucking way. I heard another guy say that God is black, but he was just back from Bible Juvie. There are always a few Bible thumpers who see God as the black, because that's what they came for, you know? They feel this thing, and it's big and scary and holy so they call it "God" because that makes them feel safer, but nothing about the Presence is safe. Beautiful, yeah. But... I can't think of the word. "Merciless" maybe.

If that was God, we're in a shitload of trouble.

[laughs]

DR. GANTRY

You don't think God can be merciless?

INMATE #6455DA04

Listen, I WASN'T GOING TO TELL you this, because I know it just sounds crazy, but the Presence isn't from here. They're... visiting. My grandfather, you know, he had a sheep farm in New Zealand. Mostly the sheep were free, but in the spring he would go up to their pastures to check in on them, get rid of the sick ones, shear the rest. That's what the Presence is like. They're here, checking up on this place, you see? And they're going to GET RID OF sickness.

DR. GANTRY

Which is us.

INMATE #6455DA04

Right! Exactly! We're the disease, and the Presence is here to find the cure.

DR. GANTRY

And you're okay with that? It doesn't scare you, or make you sad?

INMATE #6455DA04

Are you kidding me? I'm terrified. If you aren't scared, you're crazy.

Judson Ogram Correctional Institute – Visitors Information

Visitors please remember:

- VISITORS ARE A PRIVILEGE, not a right.
- You must be on the inmate's visitor list.
- The Visitor's Center hours are Monday through Friday, 10:00am to 1:00pm and Saturday from 10:00am to 2:00pm. You will be able to visit only for the time the inmate is authorized. The Visitor's Center may close without prior notice on Low Air Quality days.
- Visitors are subject to search. See the list of proscribed items for things not allowed in the visitor's room.
- DRESS APPROPRIATELY AND NEUTRAL; visitors must be visually distinct from inmates. No revealing attire. Although Judson Ogram is a Medium Security facility, inmates may have committed sex crimes. The following is prohibited:

1. No see-through or tight fitting clothing.
2. No shorts. (Shorts will be permitted for children 12 years of age or younger).
3. ~~No skirts or dresses higher than the middle of the knee.~~
4. No clothing with gang/club insignia or obscene gestures and/or language.
5. No TANK TOPS, ~~SHIRTS~~ or muscle shirts and no bare midriffs.
6. ~~Shoes and shirts~~ must be worn.
7. Appropriate undergarments must be worn (example: bra, slip, underwear)

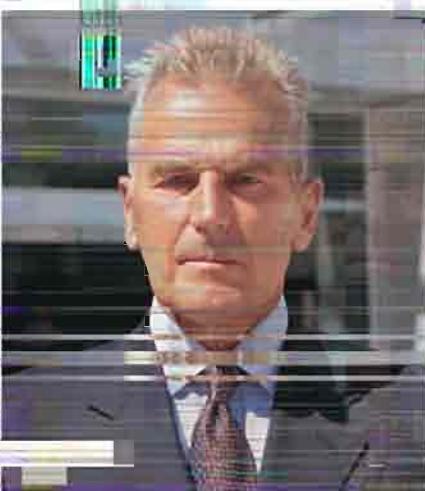

- Follow ALL DIRECTIONS given by Corrections Officers. Directions that may seem arbitrary to you have reason to exist. This is not a conjugal visit. There will be children present. Behave appropriately.
- Inmates have no pocket money. However visitors are allowed to bring money to use in the vending machines in the visiting room.
- Corrections Officers have the right to terminate a visit at any time.

List of Proscribed Items:

- All weapons, guns, knives, boxcutters, anything with an edge that can cut.
- Any toy, model or replica that resembles a weapon, no matter how fanciful. This includes children's toys, squirt guns, ray guns, plastic knives.
- Medications. All prescriptions. All needles, diabetic testing equipment, insulin pumps. If you will need medication during your visit, it will be held for you at the desk in administration and you will have to leave the visiting room to take it.
- You will be subjected to a nasal swab and a hand swipe to test for biologicals. This does not test for HIV, Hepatitis or the 'White' strains of TB.
- The federal system employs chemical sniffers to check for narcotics and banned toxins, including, but not limited to ricin and radioactive materials.
- Any food or drink not purchased in the visiting room.
- All flammable liquids/gases, cigarettes, matches, flint and steel, aerosol cans.
- All jars, cans, plastic containers. All boxes, bags or any item that might be used to conceal something must be carried by a Corrections Officer who will empty the contents in the visiting room and then take the item(s) back to the admitting desk.
- This list is not exhaustive. All items are subject to search and may be confiscated and held at the admitting desk.
- Conveying illegal materials to an inmate is a felony.

Staff

At Judson Ogram Correctional Facility, our people are what make the difference.

SUPERVISION

Our Warden is appointed by the Board of Directors. He oversees the facility with both authority and compassion.

Warden Babcock has worked at Ogram for seven years with Hillend and Social Services where he worked in the senior care division and then was Administrator of the Robert W. M. New York Network of CHILDREN'S SERVICES. In his two years here, he has increased Judson Ogram revenues by 18% by maximizing inmate labor resources for the private sector.

ADMINISTRATION

Our administrative staff bring organizational skills and an above and beyond outlook to the facility.

General Manager Susan Zerby has been a vigorous proponent of behavior modification programs for inmates in reentry, establishing an ATMOSPHERE OF ABOLISHED DISCIPLINE. She also spear-headed the Judson Ogram Pilot Studies program in partnership with Cedocore. This program has ~~not~~ been profitable for the institution, but provided enormous benefits for the public at large. For example, Xerimax had already been approved for over-the-counter sale in the United States when a JO Pilot Study revealed side effects ranging from renal damage to pulmonary edema.

INMATE CARE: BODY

Our experienced medical staff ensures our inmates stay healthy and physically fit.

The training regimes implemented by JO medical staff under Warden Hirsch have paid handsome dividends, with 23% fewer hours lost to sickness and 9% fewer Work Crew fatalities than five years ago.

INMATE CARE: MIND

Our trained psychiatrists safeguard the mental well-being of our inmates.

Judson Ogram is particularly proud of having one of the lowest suicide rates in the nation due to a set of re-education protocols developed in joint partnership with Caduceus and the Bureau of Morality.

INMATE CARE: SPIRITUAL

Our Chaplain attends to the spiritual needs of each inmate.

In addition, the chaplain oversees Judson Ogram's CHOIR, the JailBirds, famous throughout the penal system. Because the choir travels, membership is intensely competitive. Any inmate between the ages of 13 – 17 may apply for a spot by private audition.

SECURITY

OUR SECURITY GUARDS GUARANTEE the safety of the outside community and of the inmates themselves.

Judson Ogram is proud to be a member of the Veterans Employment Alliance. All Security jobs at Judson Ogram are reserved for veterans of our nation's armed forces. judsono@grank keeping soldiers employed—and inmates in line.

NOTES:

This inmate was arrested for violating restrictions on unapproved gatherings of more than 20 people. He is a middle-aged man in reasonably good health. He appears alert and well oriented, responds clearly to questions. He gives his education as High School, and his manner and vocabulary are consistent. He makes good eye contact. Deceptively well integrated. Inmate is not violent and appears to pose no physical risk to himself or others. He shows no evidence of anxiety or depression, no history of drug or alcohol abuse, though his personality currently exhibits a manic or "driven" component (e.g. patient claims not to have slept since 2/4/0000 and has not been observed to sleep since entering JOCF).

During the Red Tide event, inmate was on the Zakim Bunker Hill Bridge. As a result of a multi-car accident his car was pushed off the bridge into the river. While he was able to get out of the car himself, his attempts to get to his daughter out of the back seat failed and she drowned.

Subject has a consistent fantasy of a mystical communication with a divine force which shares the attributes of "The Presence" mass delusion (giant hand reaching down from the sky, sense of being "unclean," etc.) He claims that he was saved by the Presence. He gives his name as John of Boston and says that 'John Ferminger' was 'washed away in blood' and reborn. It is apparent that rather than deal with the emotional trauma of the accident, he has instead given it a mystical meaning, and himself a starring role in a second coming. As many commentators have noted, delusional phenomena are often "funhouse mirrors" of the patient's own cognitive organization. At the risk of over-simplifying, John Ferminger's life effectively came to an end when he watched his daughter drown. Possibly "the Presence" can best be understood as the screen onto which this internal truth was projected.

While this is consistent with histrionic disorder, the inmate otherwise shows little history consistent with that diagnosis. He is not flamboyant in manner or dress. He appears to have no history of rash decisions. He is not visibly particularly emotional nor is he suicidal. But his delusion is firmly established and he has stopped going to work or conducting any normal social interactions and has instead been preaching in the streets.

I am strongly of the opinion that this patient poses no threat to society. His values and instincts are fundamentally pro-social (if apocalyptic). In fairness, the patient will undoubtedly attempt to continue to give his witness. However, if removed from the public eye to a therapeutic setting for a period of some months, I am confident that a skillful practitioner could facilitate the integration of his daughter's traumatic death into the patient's understanding. When that integration occurs, the need for "the Presence" as an external validation of his cognitive organization will fade away, and he will no longer pose any threat to society at large.

It must be noted that the patient's "aura of revelation" can be disruptive. Within the first day of being transferred to Judson Ogram, two guards, an orderly, and a cafeteria worker approached JOCF to request that the prisoner be released, given a private hearing with the Warden, or allowed to speak to the inmate population. As of this writing, several hundred people have gathered outside the prison, calling for John's release.

Boston Sees Red

Phoebe Chacon

Boston Harbor turned red yesterday in what officials are describing as the northernmost Red Tide ever recorded. Flooding from the remnants of Hurricane Boaz and excessively warm weather for this time of year combined to create conditions that led to several car accidents and thousands of panicked calls from Boston citizens.

City officials say that the Red Tide will not affect the quality of drinking water. The smell, although noxious, is not harmful. But Red Tides do contain substances that can irritate the skin and city officials advised residents to avoid the water and to rinse thoroughly with tap water if exposed.

Red Tides are caused by rapidly multiplying algae. They've been recorded for centuries in the Gulf of Mexico. In the past, Boston waters have typically been too cold for the algae to grow to sufficient numbers to change the water color, but scientists believe changes in global weather patterns, combined with fertilizer and refuse-rich run-off in the aftermath of Boaz created exceptionally favorable conditions for what they call a "bloom event." By afternoon, the color of the water had returned to normal, and plunging temperatures and the return to more seasonal Boston weather mean that the water is unlikely to turn red in the near future.

Police dispatchers fielded hysterical calls from people who apparently believed that the red water signified the end of the world and reported seeing hallucinations. Roads and interstates were clogged with accidents. One fatality resulted from an accident on the Zakim Bridge.

John of Boston's crazed religious manifesto.

The Broken Bridge

Being the testament of JOHN BOSTON, baptized in water and in blood in the year named zero.

The Fall

The Bible tells us that God made Adam and Eve and made also for them Eden, which was an earthly paradise. But when they sinned the Lord drove them out of Eden and into this world.

It is the nature of man to fall.

As we spoiled Eden, we have spoiled this world; as we were driven from Eden, the hand of God has come to drive us from this world to the next.

We have made the earth a looking-glass, the blood of our brothers cries from the ground: the clear water is red: the air is thick with smokes and poisons that are the airs of hell. Hell is a volcano and we are the vent: our mouths bring forth fire and ashes.

We are cast into outer darkness and all we know is the drop: the darkness and the terrifying speed: the fall and the falling.

The Bridge

The life of man is driving on a bridge. Under the girders there is darkness, but I am in a high place. I am heading for a destination, which is the future. I have not seen this destination, but I drive toward it with great purpose and direction.

Under the bridge are the homeless people, but I am above them.

Under the bridge are dark waters, but I do not hear them.

I have heard the bridge is broken. Every man and woman and child in the generations of the earth has driven off the broken bridge and been lost: but I do not slow down. I am in a high place, I have purpose, I have direction. I am driving as fast as I can to get to the other side.

On Seat Belts

We are all going to die, but do we prepare? No. Instead we fill our lives with things to keep us safe. We are installing smoke detectors as we drive onto the broken bridge, we are checking our blood pressure, we are eating healthy, we are wearing seatbelts and driving as fast as we can toward the other side.

The bridge is broken and we drive into space. Darkness rushes up to us with terrifying speed and the smoke detectors do not help. Now broken and screaming there is no destination there is only blind panic and gasping and we are trapped in the car. Consult the PREPAREDNESS promised us was safe.

We see the faces of those who love us through the car window. They are trying to help but we are too scared to think we can't find the locks We are tangled in the seat belt and we are falling, turning, rolling down into darkness. Into the water.

The Broken Bridge

You will see me tonight. You will be safe in your house, in your apartment, your old FOLKESTAD, your couch, your easy chair. The soldiers will come for me. They will hustle me forward with direction and purpose, as if while holding me they were somehow on quite a different road, a different bridge.

They will take me to a room they think is not their destination. They will put the rope around my neck and they will break the bridge.

Watching at home you will shift in your chair, on your couch, in your bed. You will pour a glass of water and tell yourself it is good to be alive. But in your stomach will be a ghost, a shadow of horror. If you notice it at all you will call it "empathy" or "squeamishness" or even fear but it is none of those things. It is the sensation of falling.

Look at me, swing high here. I am a mirror.

I am you and you are falling.

IN MEMORIAM

The Los Angeles city tent city at the Kodak Theater during the 78th Annual Academy Awards Ceremony. Over the next three days, eight more dirty bombs exploded by Islamic terrorists spread a pall of radioactive dust across Greater L.A. Three days later, a presidential order required the entire city to be evacuated.

The City of Angels had become a city of ghosts.

This site is dedicated to the people of Los Angeles who lost their homes, their loved ones, and their lives in Hollywood's last fade to black.

Memorial to those killed in the 2/22 terrorist attack on L.A.

Mehrzad Bahrami you came to this country to escape Khomeni. You had a daughter you found so foreign, but you loved me and paid for my college and hid your heartbreak when I married a bobby who goes to church. But I keep the faith, papa. God! there is no God but he, the living, the self-subsisting.

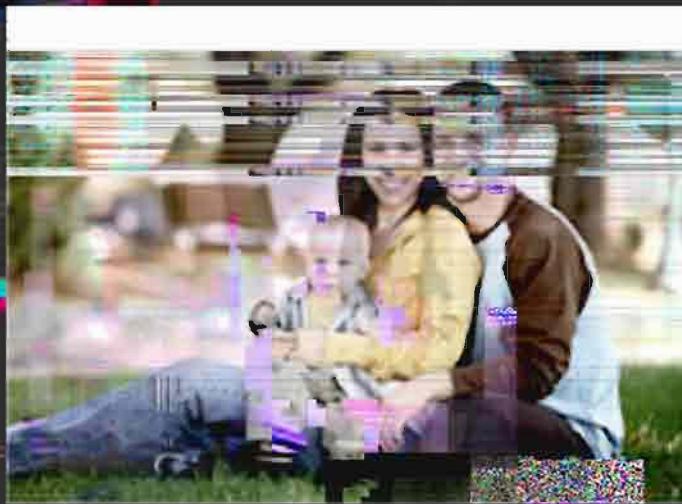

I didn't want to bomb Tehran. I didn't want to go to war with anyone. Find the terrorists, OK, put them on trial, yes, please god. But war? How could I want any mother to go through what I went through with Simon?

Phil was the last guy you'd think would enlist. But after they killed LA he felt like he had to. Felt the call and joined the army. He said he never regretted it, but he started using near the end of his tour. Got weird and reclusive when he came home—didn't want to talk to me much. OD'ed last week. Funny to think those bombs are still killing people, all these years later.

Felicia Terez de Sota was last living in St. Francis de Salle nursing home and may or may not have been evacuated with other residents. She had Alzheimers. Just trying to find out what happened to her.

Jimmy, you told me once that God doesn't matter much when things are good. God matters when you get to the end of what you can bear, you said. Well, God is taking CARE OF US BOTH NOW miss you. I'll see you again, someday, when He brings me home. Love Angie,

IN MEMORIAM...

Gerry Wier, we are being relocated to Flagstaff. Follow us there.

Vernon Hartl missing since two days after the bombing. Rescue worker. Reports he might have been last seen in Gardena area. Reward for any information.

We are looking for Adyinka Oluwafemi from Niger. We know she was in Los Angeles during the bombing. She was DO NOT KNOW her daughter was during the bombs or if she is all right. Please tell her to contact her family.

My parents worked so hard so they died right away. I was 15 and had two little brothers, Davis and Bentall. I tried to be both a Mom and a Dad to them, but I didn't do as good as I had hoped. I really tried. Bentall's been in juvie for the last 15 months for stabbing some other kid. He won't talk to me if I try to visit him. Davis killed himself last year. He didn't leave a note. I think I'm the note.

My dad was an usher at the Awards. I was in a plane dropping daisy cutters on Tehran. Whose laughing now, mother***ers?

Tran Cao Hai, missing little finger of right hand. Last seen wearing brown leather jacket and jeans. Was on motorcycle.

Lisa Gadi we are going to shelter in Las Vegas, ~~mississippi~~ if you see this note. Mom, Dad and Michael.

Valencia Yvonne Ledger last seen wearing Girl Scout uniform in front of CVS.

Carlos Sanchez, visto más reciente caminando a su lugar de trabajo. Es paisajista en Culver City. No lee ni escribe. Si lo vea, por favor añada su información al Departamento de Personas Perdidas a su Red Cross.

MY MOM'S LIPS SWELL UP DURING her teeth started falling out. She got lymphoma and she broke all the mirrors in the house so she wouldn't see herself. She was so scared of dying, right to the end she was terrified. Every year I have to go for tests. Each year, the week between when I do all the tests and when I get the results I read The Stand (I don't know why, I just always do) and I worry.

My brother Rafael was missing for two days and Karen Schaffer, a rescue worker, found him. They both had leukemia from the radiation. Rafael is great today, but Karen died. You are always a member of our family. Angel Wings. All rescuers you have angel wings.

The first baby was born dead. The second should have been. I told Sheri it wasn't her fault but she killed herself last week. I don't know what to do.

Acocella, Judy 39 worked for travel agency in Lynwood area. Serious fan of movie stars, may have been watching people arrive at Oscars. If anyone knows any information, please pass contact her sister.

PANKAJ GOEL, 34, GOEL, GOEL with malachite stone and has mole on right shoulder. Did not report for work after vacation and believed to be in Los Angeles at time of attack. Please forward info to Red Cross.

Miranda was at a playdate. I was stoned. When I heard about the bombs I panicked and I got on the freeway for Palm Springs instead of going back for her right away. I turned around after about 20 minutes but by then nothing was moving. Now I live in Boise. Nobody here even knows I had a daughter.

In the evac center this guy tried to steal our stuff so Buster bit him, but then the National Guard put him down. The other kids said they took his body over to the Sunbelt campgrounds. I believed that for years.

This was my girlfriend. I WAS AN ACTOR AND SHE WAS TO BE a model. Then we had bruises all over our bodies and our hair fell out and we weren't so pretty any more. After she got better she moved out to Orlando with everyone else in the business, but it all seemed so fake, and I couldn't stop wondering why these people hated us so much? So i went back to school instead and got a job in international development. I wish it had never happened; but in a funny way if it hadn't, the person I am now would never have existed.

Bridget was so excited to be going to the Oscars. We spent 2 days shopping for her dress.

I was 16 years old and having sex for the first time. I lost my leg to cancer less than 12 months later. I was doing okay for a few years but three weeks ago I just had my second bone marrow transplant. ~~If I'm still alive, I've probably got three months left and I see it on my parents' faces when they visit me. All I can think about is Fatima and how I love her and wish I could see her and maybe have sex a second time before I die.~~

Tabitha was born with seven fingers on each hand. Her father couldn't take it. He joined the army instead so he could go to Iran and kill the people who did this to her. He says he's not coming home until he's got one for every finger. She just wants to see her dad.

For the cast & crew of Silence: it doesn't matter now, but I work for PriceWasserCooper, and you would have won. Ad
Maiores Dei Gloriam

The roads are a parking lot with people dying in every car. Where the ricin falls some people关 their windows up, others down. They turn blue and spasm as their lungs fill up. There's over a thousand hours of youtube clips of them. I haven't found my daughter yet.

My dad drove down from Stockton to help with the evac. He was going door to door trying to get people to move when some junkie shot him for his watch.

Betty Yu was a dental hygienist. She volunteered at search parties to look through rubble and cut her hand on a nail. Ricin got in the cut. She started throwing up. Her lungs filled up with water and she drowned on dry land and she never knew why. She was my wife.

Evy started throwing up blood but the temps everyone was saying the water was poisoned so I told her not to drink but the nurse said later that's why she died.

My mother has bruises on her arms and knees and hair is falling out. Are these symptoms of radiation poisoning? What do I do?

Rapport Stratégique par Wantzen-Tabard-Boutier

Hycephamitamyn-η

PRESENTED BY
WANTZEN-TABARD-BOUTIER PHARMACEUTICAL CO.
IN COOPERATION WITH CEDOCORE CORP.

Clinical Synopsis based on one 12-week, double-blind, placebo-controlled Phase III study with a population of 1206 patients.

EXEMPTED FROM IEC EVALUATION
BY PRESIDENTIAL ORDER

I. CLINICAL SYNOPSIS

Hycephamitamyn-η is the working name for the active ingredient in a drug developed by WTB for inclusion in the Cedocore portfolio.

Methods of Administration

In its liquid form, the drug may be administered via injection, inhalation or eye drops. It is distributed in a one-use injection vial which eliminates the need for syringe and reduces the complications of both procurement and disposal. Inhalation and eye drops are comfortable and immediately effective methods. The drug may be swallowed as a pill or as a sweetened "candy" powder (with particular appeal to adolescent users), or inhaled as a powder (with particular appeal to older users due to parallels with old-style cocaine ingestion). In tablet residue preparations, the drug may be absorbed through the skin, particularly fingers and lips. It may also be smoked, although this method ranked lowest in appeal in focus group studies.

Effects and Reactions

Desired effects produced by the drug include:

- euphoria
- lethargy
- hallucinations

INGESTION OF THE DRUG as eyedrops results in a temporary blacking of the sclera, providing a convenient marker for law-enforcement to identify persistent users.

Carcinogenesis and Mutagenesis

Based on a 72-week carcinogenicity study in CD-1 mice, hycephamitamyn variants have consistently shown an increased incidence of some types of benign growths at moderate dosage levels and a mildly increased incidence of some types of cancer at high dosage levels.

Overdosage

Three instances of significant overdosage during clinical trials resulted in one mortality (myocardial infarction subsequent to ingestion of 18 times maximum recommended dosage). Due to the tachyphylaxis observed at increased dosages, overdose is not considered a high risk factor.

II. BUSINESS SYNOPSIS & STRATEGIC OVERVIEW

Illegal drug imports have been dropping internationally due to climate change and political factors. We are poised to capture market share with a drug whose manufacture is closely controlled and which produces desired effects, including sedation and suggestibility.

Total revenue from release of hycephamitamyn-η into the domestic and international black market is expected to rise slowly, but with a high rate of return thanks to superior market control and high profit margin. Ten-year projections can be seen in Figure 3.

Marketing: "Street" vs OTC

There has been some internal resistance to taking an aggressive approach to productizing this compound at the street level. While everyone agrees there are profits to be made, arguments against marketing this drug on the street usually center on the feeling that "Cedocore should not be encouraging 'illegal' behavior." This leads naturally to two suggestions:

- Find a medical fig-leaf (e.g. the "tonic" benefit of the cocaine originally in Coca-Cola);
- Productize hycephamitamyn-η as a legal, OTC drug, like alcohol or nicotine.

These suggestions, though well-meaning, don't fit Cedocore's long-range strategic planning. To wit:

Cedocore has recently entered into an alliance with several major players in the "street" drug distribution chain. Although all parties can see the potential value of this alliance, there is the natural wariness attendant on all such ventures at their outset. To put it bluntly, having entered into partnership with these entities will give them a product to sell that matches their existing consumer base.

The "black market" or "illegal" consumer also has some marked advantages over his OTC counterpart.

- The product is perceived as "cooler" and "more intense" than an OTC counterpart which is assumed to have been "watered down" by the FDA, etc.
- Illegal drugs are less subject to regulation, profit margins or price increases.
- Drug users cannot bring class-action lawsuits for side-effects, emotional trauma, carcinogenicity, etc.

Lastly, there is a moral argument. Illegal drug users, like the poor, will be with us always. They are going to buy product from someone. Why not us? Our quality control and testing are infinitely superior to their previous suppliers.

Instead of funding street gangs and urban warlordism, the profits from hycephamitamyn-η can help support not only Cedocore (80,000 law-abiding employees worldwide) but can fund the corporate-political consortium in which Cedocore so proudly plays a part.

Hycephamitamyn and Law Enforcement

We on the development team are extremely bullish on the potential synergy between Cedocore's street sales' team and law enforcement. HAVING A HOLDING IN YOUR PRODUCT LINE GIVES OUR SALES FORCE AN AUTOMATIC ENTRY INTO "DISSENT" OR "SUBVERSIVE" SUB-CULTURES THAT WOULD BE DIFFICULT FOR REGULAR LAW ENFORCEMENT TO PENETRATE.

Contacts in the DoJ are already formulating a policy to encourage local law enforcement to turn a blind eye to hycephamitamyn-η trafficking, in exchange for leads on dissidents and other kinds of domestic terrorism.

In short, we believe that Cedocore's investment in hycephamitamyn-η will be seen as a watershed moment in corporate history. Tactically, hycephamitamyn-η figures to have a long, strong lifetime as a profit-margin winner. EVEN MORE IMPORTANTLY, IT IS THE STRATEGIC BENEFIT OF TURNING THE CHAOTIC VIOLENCE OF THE BLACK MARKET INTO A SAFER, MORE STABLE PLATFORM FOR LONG-TERM BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT.

As I write this, cops are coming to arrest me and my friends for trying to make America a better place to live. I'm an IT specialist, they are mostly scientists, ranging from graduate students to eminent professors. None of us are soldiers. None of us wanted to hurt anybody. We weren't in favor of violence-just the same free speech that used to be your right under the constitution.

If you look down, you will see an email I got two days ago. Is this the kind of country you want to live in? Are these the choices you want to make?

If you wanted a job here at SBI, ask yourself *which America do I want to defend?*

If you think about that for even a little while, be careful: the cops will be coming for you next.

>>Dear Sir:

>>>It has come to the attention of the Bureau of Morality's Internet Monitoring Taskforce that several of the clients for whom you handle IT seem to show bandwidth loads that do not match their formally submitted audit numbers.

We have asked for clarification of this matter on three occasions. Your replies have been either evasive or insufficient or simply late. Frankly, speaking as one human being to another, it has been as bad as dealing with a health insurance company.

>You may be aware of that frustration yourself, in the lengthy delays you have encountered trying to process the papers for your wife's breast cancer treatments. So I know you understand our frustration, and will be motivated to do your very best to explain these bandwidth discrepancies.

>>>>>>You may submit any information in the full confidence that it will remain anonymous.

Perhaps your wife will start feeling better soon.

I'm starting to wonder if there is a workable solution. We may need to abandon this line of thought for some time. This is not a fulfilling inquiry at the present. -Yi

I'm going batshit crazy. There IS a workable solution, we just haven't seen it. -Eva

Can't you just use an old computer and around like 20 years ago and just, you know, send the message to the younger version of itself? -Wayne go away, wayne. the adults are talking. -Eva

Did anyone else read this paper from late last year by Chiarello et al? I posted a link. They proposed a bold change to the stress-energy tensor for asymmetric spin. -Carolina yikes. Just trying to help. -Wayne

I am going to propose THAT WE FOCUS ON THE NEW curvature tensor instead, as it is the polarization dependent term. Consider: It is key to the existence of superluminal photons in that place. -Yi

I read that piece. I just did NOT like their treatment of the dispersion relation. I thought it was sloppy and error-prone. -Eva

That is a valid point. But broaden your thinking and consider the conceptual framework. -Carolina

I'm focused on preparing for Thursday's test, but I'll read the article this weekend, Carolina. Thanks for reminding us of it. I respect Chiarello's work a whole lot. -Kalpesh going back to epr...after all this shit settles down, someone will have to follow through with an idea I had. here, this'll jog my memory:

oh, duh, right. In that case, I see where you're going. -Eva

I'm not married to it, I'm just trying things on for size. Anyway, I don't see why we can't just use  $E = (N_{++} + N_{+-} - N_{-+} - N_{--})/(N_{++} + N_{-+} + N_{+-} + N_{--})$

DOESNT THAT Seem more practical? -Kalpesh

Yi, re: your point about,  $\int | \frac{ds}{dt} | \neq 0$  the slow motion approximation is still useful for setting the parameters.

I appreciate the sophistication of your refinements, but I don't think that, for our purposes, it's worth the effort. We're dealing with orders of magnitude here. -Carolina

England!

24.20.1

We like to say it could never happen here. Americans are stupid, Americans are scared, the English aren't like that.

Don't you fucking believe it.

Yes, we did. We defaced the vote—for now. But right now there are more security cameras installed in Britain than in the United States. Not more per capita: more straight up.

Poor wanking British: we just like to watch.

The nerochip is our line in the sand, mates. Yes, they will put it in criminals first. Yes, most of you reading this page with intent to kill, rape and steal—the scum of the fucking nation. But when a man goes wrong, we can deal with him with a gun or a rope. When a nation goes bad, we're all fucked.

Operation Chip Sweep proves the nation is going wrong fast.

If you want the chip out, you'll have to do it yourself. Here's how.

THE Cut-Out

1. I was a medic jabbing burns in Belfast and Wight for onwards of 8 years. I know what I'm doing. Don't think fool yourself, it's not your strong suit. Just do EXACTLY what I fucking tell you.

2. You need a non-cotton bandage (I recommend Telka), a sharp knife (scalpel preferred) and a disinfectant NOT peroxide. Sod your mum – peroxide is an acid and eats the edges of the wound. taught to lie to a grasshopper when you're sporting a homemade scar. I recommend green antibacterial soap.

Instructions on how to remove nerochip illegally.

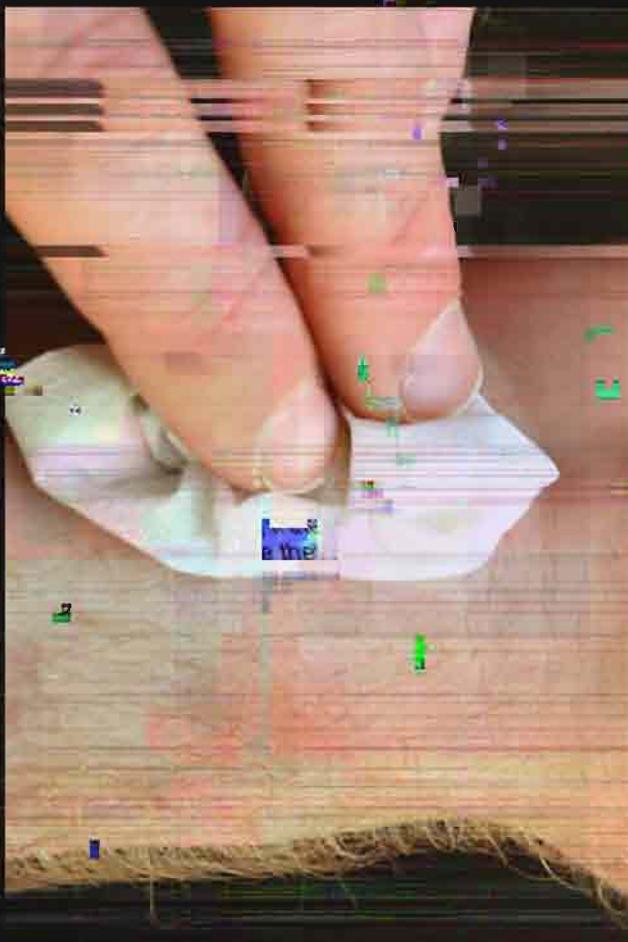

3. Sterilise your knife with the lighter. Heat both sides of the blade at the tip of the flame.

4. WAVY FINGER Index and middle fingers over that bracelet of three wrinkles at your right wrist. The tip of your left middle finger should be on top of the two tendons that rise when you clench your fist. Keep your eyes on the V of your two fingers. Mark that spot with a biro.

5. Daub each spot with a 2-3 cm diameter circle of disinfectant.

6. Cut a 1 cm long incision parallel TO YOUR TESTICLES.
No, you will not accidentally slash your wrists. Yes, there still will be blood. Yes, it will fucking hurt. Pull your knickers out of your arse and bite me a fucking stick.

7. Flex your hand backwards. The wound will flex.
Have a good long butchers.

8. The ~~nerve~~ tip is just under the ~~scar~~ doggadass is bright red. Gently grasp it with the tweezers and tug straight up out of the wound. Yes, it will fucking hurt. Your right finger may start to twitch or curl. Go slow.

9. Peel up the chip and put it in some cello tape. Stick the cello tape in ~~SOME SOMETHING~~ like a bus or taxi to keep it moving. Bikes are also good—pick a courier or student.

If the ~~implantation~~ goes tits up, you're going to find the prison doctor reinserting it. Before I took out my first, I practiced cutting the ~~inside~~ off my ~~arse~~. It's sensitive and private.

Remember – you're just meat. You'll heal. Every drop you bleed is a reminder you're alive ~~and~~ address fucking use it.

Operation Chip Sweep

24.20.2

Operation Chip Sweep

Operation Chip Sweep, known colloquially as Op Swap, was a programme planned by the Metropolitan police to capture and detain so-called 'chip-pullers' in the Brixton area of London.

Nerochips and 'Chip-pullers'

Opposition to nerochip technology was initially strong in Great Britain. However, after a series of high-profile crimes, notably the Infamous Chelsea Incident (see footnote 1), Parliament began to investigate programmes for better monitoring convicts after their release. Public opinion remained mixed but began to sway in favour of a legislation that proposed importing American nerochip technology to monitor convicts after their release.

Three years after the Chelsea Incident, Parliament passed the Scales Act (named after the MP who wrote the legislation), which required all violent offenders to be implanted with a nerochip, and proscribed removal of the nerochip without permission from the Courts. Prisoners' rights and advocacy groups protested but to no avail.

The first major explosion came when a series of ex-convicts died after trying to remove their nerochips, effectively slitting their own wrists. However, a number of individuals discovered underground resources with instructions for safely removing nerochips and performed successful nerochip removal surgeries on themselves. Because of the notorious reluctance of police to enter Brixton, many 'chip-pullers' and their clients took refuge there hoping to avoid police attention.

Community Reaction

Initially residents of Brixton were divided about how to react to the influx of refugee convicts. Some locals wanted to call in the authorities, while others vigorously opposed summoning the Metropolitan Police, believing it would only cause problems for residents. Some wanted to employ vigilante methods to expel the chip-pullers from the area. Others advocated on behalf of the refugees on political grounds, claiming the nerochips represented a severe invasion of personal freedom.

In the weeks leading up to the riots, several skirmishes occurred between Brixton residents and chip-pullers. Police began patrolling Brixton heavily, increasing resentment from residents who mistrusted police intervention. The chip-pullers found themselves effectively trapped between irate locals and the now-watchful Metropolitan Police.

Resistance propaganda site with unauthorized international coverage of the Brixton nerochip riots.

The Riot

Rumours and controversy persist regarding the precise catalyst for the riots of January 16-17. Many claim that the police deliberately instigated the riot, or that local agitators precipitated the violence by hurling rocks and burning bottles at police cars.

In point of fact, the task force was indeed preparing to sweep the area for both chip-pullers and drug dealers but police were not scheduled to enter Brixton in force for another fortnight. Authorities had seen the chip-pullers as an opportunity to make extensive arrests in Brixton whilst also having a certain amount of community support.

On the evening of Jan 16, a pair of constables responded to a domestic violence call. They mistakenly entered the wrong flat; the resident drew a firearm and threatened to shoot if the officers did not leave immediately. One resident and one police officer were killed and two residents severely wounded during the ensuing shoot-out.

The incident ignited widespread violence. The task force – ill-prepared and now violently opposed by locals – was brought in during the night to quell protests, which quickly turned to looting. Chip-pullers had become the least of their worries.

Several buildings and vehicles were destroyed during the riots, which lasted well into the following day. Several buildings and vehicles were destroyed during the riots, which lasted well into the following day.

Panicking, they then dumped the parents into the river under Chelsea Bridge, a moment initially captured by surveillance cameras and made public by several tabloid newspapers. Two of the three men involved had prior convictions.

Psychogenic Event, Weather Phenomenon, or Alien Presence: Toward a Lucid Explanation of “The Presence”

24.21.1

Timothy Ellaran (Boston University), Brian Tsunoda (Princeton University), and Irina Youket (SETI)

DRAFT PAPER

COMMENT:

Scientific speculation about “The Presence.”
Publication of this material may violate federal regulations.

Abstract

The recent spate of appearances of the phenomenon popularly known as “The Presence” might too easily be dismissed as mass hysteria, when in fact it is possible that this phenomenon has an undiscovered but comprehensible physical explanation. Here we set forth proposed methods for quantifying the effects of the Presence, along with a discussion of explanatory theories for the phenomenon’s cause.

Describing the Presence

The first reports of the phenomenon widely known as “The Presence” were recorded on February 4. Reports of the phenomenon come from all parts of the globe and have continued since that date. Media reports have been limited since the first day, possibly in an effort by the government to prevent widespread panic, but reports continue to appear hourly on unofficial channels.

A typical first-hand account of the Presence begins with seeing an immense hand reaching into the ground, followed by an intensely personal experience including a sense of culpability (either personal or collective), and often an overpowering sense of ongoing ecological disaster. It is one of the chief aims of this paper to move toward a coherent understanding of whether these accounts are purely psychological or are related to a legitimate external event.

The Presence is not easily photographed or captured on video equipment. Some images do exist (Figure 1), although there is considerable debate over the authenticity and accuracy of these materials.

COMMENT:

COMMENT:

Still under investigation is whether there is a discernible pattern to the geographical locations or times of appearance.

Subjective Evidence: First-Hand Accounts

We have accumulated reports from individuals who claim to have seen the Presence throughout the United States. From those reports we have distilled a set of six common themes that appear in a high percentage of accounts:

1. Giant hand/arm
2. Culpability (personal or collective)
3. Hearing voices
4. Dissociation
5. Mention of either disaster or salvation
6. Mention of ecological issues

Additionally, we have discovered four themes that appear in a small number of accounts and which do not appear in the most credible first-hand accounts of the Presence:

7. Giant faces
8. Miraculous healing
9. Hearing quotes from specific existing texts
10. Reports of "lost time"

These last 4 themes represent less than 15% of the total reports. We hypothesize that these reports are false positives: that is, hysterical or intentionally fabricated accounts, rather than authentic, subjectively honest first-person accounts. The chart below (Figure 2) shows the rate of appearance of these themes in the total population, contrasting with the rate of appearance after removing the false positives, which were determined by eliminating any account that referenced any of themes 7-10 or which did not reference at least two of themes 1-6 above.

Interestingly, while about 10% of the apparently valid reports did not refer to ecological issues, absolutely none of the supposed "false positives" did.

The larger question remains of whether first-hand accounts represent an epiphenomenon of consciousness or whether they represent a valid perception of reality, albeit filtered by human consciousness.

COMMENT:

Objective Evidence: Physical Effects

Meteorological Data

Meteorological data for the Eastern seaboard for February 4 indicates that indeed, at least some reports of the Presence correlate to meteorological events. Two reports of the Presence in West Virginia (both of which failed the validity test outlined above) in fact occurred within 5 miles and within 30 minutes of a funnel cloud appearing on doppler radar. A funnel cloud or small tornado is most likely the event that triggered both reports.

COMMENT:

Power Grid Surges

Preliminary findings indicate a slight power surge in urban centers during the Presence's appearances, although it is yet to be determined fully whether these differences are statistically significant, and if so, whether they are causally related to the Presence.

Traffic Disruptions

Traffic patterns have certainly been disrupted during appearances of the Presence. A prominent example is the multi-car accident on the Zakim Bridge in Boston on February 4. According to preliminary figures gathered from news media sources, appearances of the Presence seem to be accompanied by significantly higher-than-normal accident rates, although these numbers must be confirmed against official records.

In general, traffic disruptions do appear to be triggered by human reactions to the event, rather than by physical disruptions. Traffic signals, toll booths, and other automated systems do not appear to malfunction more than usual during appearances of the Presence.

Explaining the Presence: Outlining Origin Theories

A Psychogenic Event

Mass psychogenic illness is a convenient way to dismiss this phenomenon, but one of the aims of this paper is to provide compelling evidence that this explanation is insufficient to account for the Presence, although collective hysteria may in fact be one of the effects. A large number of people (current estimates range from 5,000 to 75,000) experienced the Presence on February 4, before any public discussion had taken place. Many experienced it individually, rather than in crowds, discrediting the idea that herd behavior is a sufficient explanation.

Extraterrestrial Communication

The anecdotal evidence certainly indicates a strong psychological reaction that is intensely personal but also appears to be categorically different from demonstrably psychogenic events, such as stigmata.

COMMENT:

The perception of a "huge arm" is probably an anthropomorphic neurological bias, but the attendant personification goes beyond the awe normally associated with geological or meteorological events. The question arises whether this phenomenon is an attempt to communicate by a class of being which humans may not even be able to perceive physically.

Meteorological Phenomenon

A third possibility is that the Presence represents a heretofore rare or non-existent weather phenomenon, possibly precipitated by climate change. The intense personal reaction is certainly warranted: Imagine the psychological impact of encountering thunder and lightning for the first time.

COMMENT:

Conclusion

While the Presence is a phenomenon surrounded by controversy and uncertainty, there are myriad resources at our disposal to determine the precise effects and cause of this mysterious event. Whether this is a mass psychogenic event, a previously undiscovered meteorological phenomenon, or in fact the appearance of an alien presence, it behooves the scientific community to give careful consideration to this event of great international significance, and devote sufficient resources to discovering the true story behind the mystery of the Presence. Enormous amounts of research money should immediately be poured into this area, particularly my lab, blah blah blah... <Brian to polish>

COMMENT:

COMMENT:

- great skeleton pass, Irina! -TE
- Thanks, Brian, you're up. Don't mean to rush, but publishing this "fast" will have a non-zero impact on our careers
- On it. My old supervisor is a NAS member. He's willing to put it in the PNAS, which should help. -BT
- Nice! -TE
- That would be perfect. -IY
- ...For a co-authorship, of course. -BT
- Of course. <seethe> IY
- Still worth it. -TE

COMMENT:

- I'd like to see temp, barometric pressure, etc. charted against prior years (although, obviously, weather benchmarks are proving less than reliable given the current rate of change). -IY
- Look for anything that indicates EM fluctuations. Increased lightning strikes, etc. Or variations in the reliability of the weather instrumentation itself. -TE

COMMENT:

- I'm unwilling to rule out a psychogenic explanation, although not necessarily collective hysteria per se. I want to see a documented history of first cases by geography and time; I also want to look for external triggers that could have caused this reaction. -IY
- Internationally? Causing consistent reactions across cultural borders on the same day? -BT

COMMENT:

- Can we source this to the original photographer? -BT

COMMENT:

- I was talking to a friend who works in customer service at Vox; she said they had a spike in complaints on the 4th. Might be related. She's going to get me a printout of the day's numbers against average complaints. -TE
- Excellent! If we can get numbers on actual outages, also, we could possibly correlate that to Presence appearances and see what kind of physical effect it's having. -BT
- My friend just called—they wouldn't let her take the printouts from the building. "Corporate espionage protection" or some such bull. -TE
- VoxTelecom wouldn't release cell phone figures either, even though they cooperated with me a year ago for a different project. There is definite resistance at the corporate level, and it appears to be specific to the Presence. -IY

COMMENT:

- IF this is an alien presence, we should see if we can correlate ground appearances to an object—or objects—in orbit. -TE

- I'm checking to see if the sightings we've already mapped could match up to ground paths. Also searching our databases for any incoming signals that started (or modulated significantly) on the 4th. -IY

COMMENT:

- Tim should include his first-hand account. -BT
- I don't think it's appropriate. -TE
- It's inappropriate not to, Tim. Your personal experience is going to bias your thinking. In the interest of transparency, you should include at least a summary of your experience. -IY

COMMENT:

- I'm going to sit with the space physics guys to see if we're overlapping with any of their research. -BT

COMMENT:

- It feels right, but I can't go beyond that. I felt like I was in the presence of "Other" -- even as it took me outside of myself. -TE
- I will admit to wanting this to be the explanation, for obvious reasons, but I also think there are compelling reasons to support this theory. The anecdotal evidence certainly indicates a strong psychological reaction that is intensely personal but also seems categorically different from the "Virgin Mary appears in a grilled cheese sandwich" class of phenomena. Something real and urgent is happening. Someone is trying to communicate with us; and we are 'hearing' that message, albeit through the haze of our own cognitive filters. -IY

- I'm starting to think you both need to back away from the Kool-Aid. What were early religious expressions if not the anthropomorphizing of physical phenomena? Sun gods, mountain gods, ocean gods. The Presence has a strongly religious component that mirrors that beautifully. -BT

- But Tim didn't have a religious experience. -IY

- Yes he did. He came up against something beyond the borders of his comprehension and so responded as humans have responded for millennia. He responded according to his life-long religion (science) rather than more mundane theistic or pantheistic systems, but it was nonetheless a religious experience. -BT

- I'd like to say Brian's wrong, but I'm not sure. It felt very personal and very valid, and I'd like to believe that my attempt to understand it scientifically was a conscious decision after the fact, rather than my knee-jerk response. But the fundamental question is really whether my subjective experience was simply an epiphenomenon of consciousness or was in fact a true perception of reality, albeit filtered by consciousness. Was I dreaming—or was I waking up? -TB

Non-Employees: Become a Part of the Anglo-Johnson Family!

We have conversion options to meet various levels of need and involvement:

- Blood: The blood donation requires you be negative for HIV, Hepatitis, TB, or parasitical infection. The pay is 12£ (paid in Anglo-Johnson certificates, good on company property.) Donations cannot be made more than once a month. Anyone who reaches the 2 litre donation level will receive a 50£ A-J Certificate. During donation, donor will have access to free snacks and beverages.
- Marrow: The bone marrow donation requires you be negative for HIV, Hepatitis, TB, or parasitical infection. The pay is 40£ base with a 20£ bonus for those with higher European genetic make-up as determined by genetic analysis (paid in Anglo-Johnson certificates, good on company property).
- Cornea: A cornea donation requires you pass an ophthalmic exam and be in overall good health. The pay is 120£ base with a 30£ bonus for donors under the age of 25 (paid in Anglo-Johnson certificates, good on company property)
- Kidney: A kidney donation requires you be negative for HIV, Hepatitis, TB, or parasitical infection. As a specification for the conversion, during the duration of the conversion and follow-up, the donor will live within the compound and the donor's immediate family (defined as legal spouse and children, or in the case of a donor between 14 and 18 years of age, siblings and parents*) will be issued meal vouchers (good on company property).
- Skin: During the duration of the conversion and follow-up, the donor will live in the compound. Donor will also be paid 200£ per day which can be used to PAY FOR TRAVEL other immediate family members* to live within the compound. Rates may vary based on quantity of conversion and demand.

* Children will be subject to DNA QwikTest™ to determine blood relationship with at least one parent, or parent must show internationally recognized court documents of adoption.

Multiple Conversion

Individuals who complete three different conversion options automatically guarantee themselves or a family member employment at A-J, if no pending exists.
